Hoover Train Enroute to Pueblo, Colo. —(AP)—Having completed his one campaign tour in the northern tier of border states, Herbert Hoover Saturday passed into the normally Republican state of Kansas, the home of his running mate, Senator Charles Curtis.

Before him were a series of rear platform talks in the Sunflower state and the fourth and last address of his transcontinental trip. This will be delivered early Saturday at Pueblo, Colo., where his special train will make a stop of half an hour.

During his two nights and a day of traveling from Washington, the Republican presidential candidate has been accorded enthusiastic receptions which culminated last night in a demonstration at St. Louis that rivaled the one given him at Madison Square garden in the home city of his Democratic opponent when he closed his eastern campaign more than ten days ago.

TO MEET FARM NEEDS

Speaking in the Coliseum, Hoover presented to the agricultural world his plan for the formation of a new governmental institution, the purpose of which he said would be to meet not only the present farm needs but also those which might arise in the future.

"We propose to create a federal farm board composed of men of understanding and sympathy for the problems of agriculture," he said, and

BLAINE HITS RECORD OF REPUBLICAN PARTY

Chicago —(AP)—Senator John J. Blaine of Wisconsin dealt with eight issues of the national campaign at a Democratic rally here Friday night. Teapot Dome, farm relief, waterways, waterpower, foreign policies, injunctions, the Volstead act and campaign contributions received attention from the Progressive Republican who has endorsed the candidacy of Governor Smith.

Calling attention to the report of the Republican national committee on contribution, Senator Blaine declared $200,000 of the total of $4,100,000 had been received from the "ways and means committee of Pennsylvania" and another hundred thousand from "the Republican national committee of Pennsylvania".

He demanded to know why the contributors to those committees were not named and declared that a triumvirate of organizations is backing Herbert Hoover, the Republican national committee, the Anti-Saloon league and the Ku Klux Klan.

KIDNAPING SUSPECT ORDERED DISMISSED

Kenosha —(AP)—Earl Steele, 21, one of the four Alien-A strikers charged with the kidnaping and tarring of a knitting mill employee here Sept. 26, was dismissed by Municipal Judge Elmer Hackbarth, 23, who made a confession implicating Steele and two others, was ordered held for trial on $5,000 bonds.

The court ruled that testimony against Steele, identifying him as one of the four masked men in the kidnaping, was insufficient to bind him over for trial.

Hackbarth waived a preliminary hearing and will stand trial with Oliver Huxford, 21, and Dwight Jones, 21, who were held on the same bail after previous hearings. The sentence carries a maximum penalty of 35 years in the state penitentiary.

Cabinet In Rumania Is Ordered Out

Bratianu's Resignation Causes Sensation Throughout Country

Bucharest, Rumania —(AP)—Vintila Bratianu, Rumanian premier for the past year and successor of his late brother, Ion Bratianu, long a dominating figure in Rumanian political life, resigned Saturday at the request of the regency.

Bratianu's resignation with that of his cabinet has caused a sensation throughout the country. The premier resigned after a cabinet meeting Saturday morning at which he informed his colleagues that the regency had given him until Dec. 1 to resign so that the powerful national peasants party which forms 30 per cent of the voters in Transylvania and has been his strongest opponent, could join freely in the coming elections of the annexation of Transylvania by Rumania on that date, their participation being vital to the success of the ceremonies.

Bratianu said that he had informed the regency that it was of supreme importance to the solvency of the nation that the recent stabilization loan should be realized and that he asked for an indefinite period of time in which to put it through. He declared that by ignoring the fate of the stabilization loan the regency had created the possibility of the loan going by default.

The premier told his colleagues that the regency, however, led by G. Buzdugan, president of the supreme court of justice, overruled him. The regency consists of Prince Nicholas, son of Queen Marie, Patriarch Cristea and M. Buzdugan, who rule Rumania in the name of 7-year-old King Michael, son of former Crown Prince Carol.

3 PERSONS KILLED ON WAY TO SEE GRID GAME

Newark, O. —(AP)—Three persons going to the Ohio State-Princeton football game at Columbus were killed shortly before noon, and a fourth is in a serious condition at the hospital here, as a result of their automobile striking a truck on a curve and going into a ditch. Two unidentified men were hurled to death when the machine which carried them down caught fire and burned up.

A third, F. A. Sherrer of Sherodsville, died soon after being received at the hospital. The other injured man in the hospital is Frank Bowers, residence unknown.

SMITH PLEADS FOR PARTY IN EMPIRE STATE

New York Governor Will Make Last Personal Appearance Tonight

By D. HAROLD OLIVER
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York —(AP)—Having taken the time in the home stretch of the presidential campaign to plead with all the forces at his command for election of the Democratic state ticket headed by Franklin D. Roosevelt, Governor Smith winds up in Madison Square garden Saturday night the most intensive fight of his 25 years in politics.

The Democratic standard-bearer is confident he will be the next president of the United States and Saturday night he will tell the home folks the reason why he thinks so. It will be the last audience he will address in person and his managers hope to make it the largest of his three swings around the country.

Monday night after Herbert Hoover has made his final 15 minutes appeal to the American people from Palo Alto, Cal., to retain the Republicans in power at Washington, the Democratic nominee will address the voters, but it will be from a radio broadcasting studio.

PLEA FOR ROOSEVELT

In his first speech in his home state since he addressed the Democratic state convention at Rochester, Oct. 1, Governor Smith told an audience in the Brooklyn Academy of Music Friday night that it was up to the people of New York to keep the Democrats in power at Albany if they wanted to see "a constructive, forward-looking, wise, and economical administration" of their affairs continued.

Discussing state issues and their relation to similar questions in the national campaign, the nominee assailed Albert Ottinger, state attorney general and Republican candidate for governor, on his waterpower, agriculture, education and state finance stands he struck the question of prohibition.

"Well," the governor remarked, "that is a little bit too long to wait. There isn't going to be any report, because there isn't going to be any commission. I'll attend to that. As I have promised throughout the country, I shall take that question to the American people and lay it before them fairly, clearly, straight-forwardly and intelligently, and I shall let them settle it."

POINTS TO RECORD

Loud applause greeted this statement and then the governor swung into his own eight years of administration of state affairs and challenged his opposition to find fault if they could.

"At no time in the history of this state," he said, "was the government of this state in as good condition as it is today."

"I am going through a national campaign. I am fighting some pretty bright men. They have plenty of brains and they have a great deal of money. We are within two days of election. Have you heard from the lips of any mortal man a single criticism about the government of this state under me? He can't do it."

Both Parties Confident They'll Carry Wisconsin

BY DONALD C. BOLLES
Associated Press Staff Writer

Milwaukee —(AP)—Into the hands of the electorate, the political fortunes of Herbert Hoover, and Al Smith in Wisconsin were committed Friday with confident statements by campaign managers for the rival presidential candidates.

At the close of a campaign marked by more uncertainty of the outcome than has been seen since 1912, both camps forecast victory for their candidate. Neither went further than to predict that the candidate whose cause they espoused, would be the popular choice of the state for president, and gain its 13 electoral votes. Both shied from predicting majorities.

Otto Labadie, chairman of the Democratic state central committee who has directed the state campaign for Governor Smith, said he counted on Milwaukee and eight other counties to roll up a margin of 50,000 votes which he did not believe would be offset by the result in the rest of the state.

Stephen McMahon, the generalissimo of the Hoover-Curtis forces in the Badger state, expressed his opinion that 53 of the 71 counties would be carried by the Republican nominee, with nine for Smith, and nine doubtful. This, he felt, showed clearly that a majority for Hoover will be recorded.

Whatever the outcome, there was general agreement that it would be settled by a vote that would surpass all former records for the state. It would exceed 800,000 and the anticipated large increase over 1924, when 840,000 ballots were cast, was predicated on the intense and quickened interest shown in the campaign drawing to a close.

In weeks of intense campaigning, the contest for the electoral vote of the state has been worked up to a high pitch, and probably not in many campaigns have the two parties made such an exhaustive effort to attract the vote. The Democrats have been spurred to great efforts by what they regarded as

BOY CONFESSES HE STRANGLED GIRL

Mother Finds Body on Bed After Return from Work Friday Evening

New York —(AP)—Vincent Rice, 17, confessed Saturday, police announced, that he killed Alice Josst, 15, State Island school girl, in her home Friday.

The girl's body, a piece of insulated electric wire twisted around her neck, was found by the mother Friday night on her return from work. The body was on a bed, fully clothed. The furniture of the room was disarranged, but there were no signs of a struggle, police said. There was a bruise on the head such as might have been made by a blunt instrument.

The girl was last seen alive at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. When her mother, Mrs. Lucy Josst, a widow, left for work. The girl was reading and promised to be at home on her mother's return. The family living on the other side of the duplex dwelling said they heard no sounds of a struggle nor did they see anyone enter the house during the mother's absence.

According to police, said he strangled the girl to death with a cord from an electric fan after he had beaten her unconscious following a quarrel.

The youth, who had been attentive to the girl about a year, called at her home Friday night, knowing that she would be alone. The cause of the quarrel was not disclosed.

CURTIS RETURNS TO HIS OWN STATE TO CAST VOTE

Enroute with Senator Curtis to Wichita, Kan. —(AP)—The tedious trial of vice president campaigning left Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas back across the boundary of his native state for a final address Saturday night at Wichita.

More than 13,000 miles of travel were behind the 65-year-old veteran as he left the campaign route which had taken him during the last ten weeks back and forth and up and down the nation. Tired, but happy and confident, the nominee was eager Saturday to wind up the wearisome grind on home soil. At 7 o'clock Saturday night at Wichita, the senator's return early Sunday to his home in Topeka to rest and vote on Tuesday.

CAL PRAISES HERB IN WIRE; SEES VICTORY

President Says He's Confident That Hoover Will Be Competent Successor

Washington —(AP)—High praise for Herbert Hoover came Friday night from the White House.

Breaking for a second time the silence which he otherwise has maintained consistently with respect to the presidential campaign, President Coolidge wired the Republican nominee at the conclusion of his St. Louis address an expression of confidence in his ability to administer the affairs of the nation and a declaration that he had demonstrated a fitness for the presidency.

Although reports persisted for weeks that Mr. Coolidge would at some stage take an active part in the Hoover campaign, he had previously made but a single public pronouncement in this connection—a message to the Massachusetts state Republican convention asserting that the country needed a continuance of Republican rule.

Friday night's telegram was dispatched after the president had heard Hoover's speech through the White House radio. There had been no indication that such a step was contemplated.

LAUDS SPECIES

Declaring that he had listened to the St. Louis address with great satisfaction, Mr. Coolidge termed it the concluding speech in a series which had disclosed "a breadth of information, a maturity of thought and a soundness of conclusion on public questions never surpassed in a previous presidential campaign."

The chief executive told the nominee he had had "the knowledge and judgment" to "tell the people the truth," that he had been clear, candid and courteous and had demonstrated a faith in the people and a "consciousness that the truth has a power and conclusiveness of its own that is always supreme."

"You have shown your fitness to be president," the chief executive said in conclusion. "You are able, experienced, trustworthy and safe. Your success in the campaign seems assured and I shall turn over the great office of president of the United States of America to your keeping, sure that it will be in competent hands in which the welfare of the people will be secure."

TORAL CLAIMS HE WAS TORTURED BY POLICE

San Angel, Mexico —(AP)—Charges that he was tortured by the police after his arrest in an effort to force him to confess that others were implicated in the slaying of President-Elect Oregon were made by Jose De Leon-Toral at his trial Saturday.

The assassin of the president-elect told the judge and jury that he was tortured for the first time that this has been charged publicly. He swore upon cross-examination that he was hanged by the thumbs, that his body was stretched upon an "immovable rack" and that other "horrible tortures" were used which he was able to endure "by the grace of God."

McAdoo Won't Desert His Party At Polls Tuesday

Augusta, Ga. —(AP)—A message from William G. McAdoo, saying he would preserve his party allegiance this year was made public here Saturday by Thomas J. Hamilton, editor of the Augusta Chronicle.

Hamilton telegraphed McAdoo as to how he would stand in the election next Tuesday. The McAdoo reply follows: "Replying to your telegram, I am absolutely opposed to Governor Smith's position on prohibition and I shall preserve my party allegiance. Am making some reply to similar inquiry from Howell. Pleasant A. Stovall is publisher of the Savannah Press."

Hamilton was the pre-convention manager for McAdoo in 1924 when he carried the state in the Democratic presidential preference campaign.

Vote Early Next Tuesday

You'll be doing a real service to your community if you vote early in the election next Tuesday. The tremendous record-breaking registration assures vote twice as large as has ever been cast here and there is a grave danger that latecomers will not have an opportunity to cast their ballots. If you can vote in the morning do so.

Hounds Will Aid In Hunt For Farmer

No Trace Found of Man Who Left Home Near Park Falls on Thursday

Park Falls —(AP)—Bloodhounds were called into use Saturday in a search by Park Falls residents for Warren Ehler, 40, who disappeared Thursday when he left to sell a neighbor some hay.

With his gun on his shoulder, Ehler left his wife and seven children at 10 o'clock Thursday morning to go to Kalsner, about five miles from his home. On the way he was to arrange for the sale of marsh hay that he had cut.

When he did not return at night-fall Thursday, his wife became alarmed and notified neighbors. The out-over district is sparsely settled but a dozen men were obtained and searched the swamps all night with lanterns.

Friday morning Sheriff Alm at Phillips was notified and when Ehler was not found by noon, came and took charge of the search with several deputies. More than 40 men followed old logging roads and scouted through the woods until dark.

Ehler is believed to be lost in unfamiliar territory or has met with an accident. Authorities are inclined to disregard theories that he has deliberately left home, as no trace of him has been found in nearby villages or along the railroad line.

ALLEGED EMBEZZLER IS NABBED AT MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee —(AP)—Wayne Jewel, 35, former Nebraska financier and object of a nationwide search since June, was arrested here Friday night at a downtown hotel and is held for authorities of Perkins-co. Neb., on an embezzlement warrant.

Police here learned that Jewel was wanted in connection with the failure of the Exchange bank at Madison, Neb., shortly after it was taken over by the Bankers Guaranty corporation, a holding company of which Jewel was president. The bank was incorporated for $300,000. Hundreds of depositors lost their savings when the failure came, police said.

Registering under his own name, Jewel gave his address as 965 S. Herndon, Los Angeles.

Despite Jewel's statement that he would fight extradition, Sheriff Harry F. Miller of Perkins-co. wired police that a man would start immediately for Milwaukee to take the financier back.

KOA WILL BROADCAST HOOVER TALK TONIGHT

ROBINSON CLOSING HIS DRIVE FOR VOTES TODAY

Enroute with Senator Robinson to Clarkburg, W. Va. —(AP)—A campaign that ranks with the most extensive in American politics will close Saturday when Senator Joe T. Robinson, Democratic vice presidential candidate, ends his coast to coast tour with a speech at Clarkburg.

The first southern Democrat to have a major place on the national ticket since Civil war days, Senator Robinson also was the first Democrat since that time to invade the south. His long tour neared its close here he was confident success would crown his efforts next Tuesday.

Throughout his campaign he has endeavored to give his audiences a word picture of Governor Smith and to explain the issues of the campaign as his chief laid them down in his speech of acceptance and other addresses.

Lawrence Gives Final Survey of Chances of Presidential Candidates

ODDS ARE AGAINST AL

Must Carry All of Solid South and Many Doubtful States to Win

(This is the fifth of a series of dispatches by David Lawrence giving a final survey and forecast of the presidential election of next Tuesday, the summary being based on a personal tour of 16 states, a train public sentiment in presidential and congressional elections.)

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1928, by Post Pub. Co.

Washington—Few persons remember offhand the number of electoral votes by which presidential elections in the past have been decided, so it may be assumed the people generally are far more interested in who will win than in the exact way in which the final count of states is actually tabulated.

This correspondent confesses a certain diffidence in trying to appraise a national election so many years after the fact, but feels that certain factors involved here are an analysis of a trend and not a guess as to electoral totals. With the background of previous campaigns in mind, the writer has failed to develop a conviction that either Governor Smith or Herbert Hoover has an absolute hold on the pivotal states of the east which cast the big electoral votes.

It is possible, Governor Smith to win by a narrow margin but the writer feels this is improbable. The ratio of doubt, in other words, favors the election of Herbert Hoover. The factor of contentment, so vital in national elections, is with him. It always benefits politically the party in power if there is no industrial depression going on and tends to operate as a resistance against change of administration.

WEAK SPOTS FOR SMITH

To demonstrate the soundness of the ratio-of-doubt theory and to prove that Herbert Hoover's chances are much better than those of Governor Smith, let us take an imaginary table of electoral votes giving Governor Smith the election by 277 (285 votes being necessary to win)

SPECIAL DETECTIVES ON DUTY IN INDIANA

Indianapolis, Ind. —(AP)—Russell Ryan, head of the legal department of the Democratic state committee, announced Saturday that approximately 150 detectives from the Bureau agency will be assigned to the principal cities in Indiana on election day to guard against possible fraud. The assignment of detectives was arranged by the Democratic national committee, Ryan said.

Several detectives already have been at work in Lake-co. (Calumet region) and in Marion-co. (Indianapolis), Ryan said. Sherman Burns, son of the late William J. Burns, was scheduled to arrive in Indianapolis from Chicago to take personal charge of the Indiana situation.

SELF-TORTURE STORY ACCEPTED BY POLICE

Lake Bluff, Ill. —(AP)—Miss Elfrida Knapk's own meagre story of self-torture in the furnace room of the Lake Bluff police station was generally accepted Saturday despite discrepancies in the explanation of circumstances which caused her death.

An inquest into the case was set for Nov. 5, and in the meantime efforts will be made to clarify, and if possible explain the woman's burning. The body will be further examined to determine if her story of self-immolation must be accepted as conclusive.

Totals 254 277

SLIGHT MARGIN POSSIBLE

Thus it is seen that Smith could lose eleven votes and still have a winning 285. Hence any loss of 12 votes or more means his defeat on the basis of the foregoing table and he must hold the solid south by sides, whereas there is doubt about one or two southern states. He could lose Maryland 8, or North Dakota 5, or Rhode Island 5, individually but not lose any three. Hence he must carry three out of the five but while his chances in each state are good they are not better than fifty-fifty in any one.

In addition to the foregoing there is a second group of seven states in which Smith has an even chance but he must carry them all to be elected. Thus he can not afford to lose a single one of the following group—Kentucky 13, Massachusetts 18, Missouri 18, New York 45, New Jersey 14, Tennessee 12, and Wisconsin 13. Anybody who believes Smith can make a clean sweep of these seven states without a single defection is likely to believe that Smith has a chance to pick up a third group consisting of Illinois, Oklahoma, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Minnesota which group contains sixty-two votes. And there doesn't seem to be even as good as a fifty-fifty chance for Smith to carry this last group. So it resolves itself into a question of Smith's opportunity to win all seven of the second group. Can he do it?

Telegraphic reports from Kentucky and Missouri indicate the states are close but leaning to Smith. Granting that Massachusetts may go to Smith and that New York will follow her own governor, their remains a big doubt about New Jersey. Of the seven states, therefore, the chances are that New Jersey and Kentucky may defeat Smith when as a matter of fact one state alone would be sufficient.

In fairness to Smith claimants it must be said that they have high hopes of picking up 29 votes in Illinois, 7 in Connecticut and 4 in New Hampshire, which would go far toward offsetting the loss of New Jersey and Kentucky and would of course elect Smith, but the reader is just as good a prophet on that subject as the Democratic national committee, for while it is possible for the same tide that brings Smith the electoral votes of New York and Massachusetts to give him Connecticut and New Hampshire and Illinois, it is improbable that the intensity of the Smith wave is anything so overwhelming.

The writer frankly does not believe the eastern group will break up into a freakish electoral table but that states will go as their neighbors do and that if Smith carries New York by a big majority his wave will be strong enough to carry the big eastern states while if his tide is not high enough in his own state he will lose New Jersey and perhaps Massachusetts. The returns in New York state which are usually early, should give a better index to this election than they did in 1916. There is more sign of a close result in New York state than a landslide there for Smith. Thus again the ratio of doubt would favor Herbert Hoover.

F. H. JEBE DECLARED BANKRUPT BY COURT

F. H. Jebe, 608 E. North-st., has been declared bankrupt by F. A. Geiger, district court judge for the second Wisconsin district. A petition, including the schedule of assets and liabilities, has been referred to C. H. Forward of Oshkosh for administration.

Mr. Jebe is director of public school music at Oshkosh and has established a temporary home in that city. He also directs several musical circles in this city. He formerly was the director of the Jebe Violin school on E. College-ave.

MONROE-CO MAY ADOPT MILK TESTING

Seventy-five meetings were held in Monroe-co last week under County Agent L. G. Kuennig, to popularize the "milk order" system of dairy testing.

It is hoped the farmer of Monroe-co will adopt the system. The simplified plan for testing cows makes it possible for farmers to take samples of each cow's milk, send it by mail to a central office where it is tested by a trained tester, who enters calculations of the month in the record book of each member.

This plan was devised by R. A. Amundson, Outagamie-co agricultural agent, and is being used by the farmers of this county.

Excerpts from An Editorial of THE CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE, A Republican Newspaper, Wednesday, October 31, 1928

SMITH TELLS THE TRUTH

Gov. Smith's denunciation of certain influences working in or for the Republican party was a true statement of facts. It is accepted as such by many Republicans. The Klan and the Anti-Saloon league are twin calamities working for the election of the Republican national ticket. Their practices are intolerable. Their intolerance is disgraceful. They have exhibited some of the meanest motives which ever had a place in American politics. What they offer as patriotism and public morality has protected or promoted some of the worst corruption.

It is in spite of them that many Republicans will vote for Mr. Hoover. They will not leave their party just because of these influences, but they regard the association as damaging to every principle for which the party ought to stand.

As Gov. Smith says, the Anti-Saloon league uses its organization for the intimidation of public officials. It uses its money, collected and expended without accounting, to destroy independence of political thought and action. In the pursuit of its single idea of bigoted morality it will uphold dishonest men and attempt the ruin of decent and virtuous men. It is a dictatorship without intelligence and without conscience. The Klan, in politics, represents organized ignorance and prejudice. If it had courage, it would use physical violence. Its weapon is vindictive slander.

The Republican party has these two allies and its connection with them is sufficiently apparent to expose it to the properly indignant language of Gov. Smith. The Tribune feels precisely as he does in the matter.

We think Mr. Hoover is wrong on prohibition and that Gov. Smith is right. Mr. Hoover's position forces him to accept support which he himself must distrust and dislike. Gov. Smith's position enables him to stand clear of this blight.

Lay Aside Your Partisanship Rise Above Your Party. Declare for Honest Government, Independence of Political Thought and Action and Clean Politics by Voting for—

ALFRED E. SMITH—for President
JOSEPH T. ROBINSON—for Vice President
AL SCHMEDEMAN—for Governor

BOTH PARTIES SURE OF BADGER STATE

The most favorable signs of victory for their party since 1912 when President Wilson carried Wisconsin through the splitting of the Republican vote by Taft and Roosevelt. This situation caused a quickening of activity by the Republicans, who claim to have conducted the best organized campaign the state has been in years.

STRESS PERSONALITIES

In their appeal to the electorate, both sides have stressed not only issue but the personalities of their candidates, with a wide divergence in their conception of what constituted the battle lines.

In seeking support for the Hoover-Curtis ticket, the Republicans have stressed the ability of the former secretary of commerce, and as a result the major issues from a Wisconsin viewpoint as the protective tariff as important not only to business but the diversified agriculture business of the commonwealth, the St. Lawrence waterway, and immigration to the state to elect Mr. Hoover to assure the continuance of the prosperity the country has enjoyed under the Republican regime.

Fighting for the upper hand in a normal Democratic state where only 125,000, the Democrats have sought to attract the support of Republicans and the Independent and Progressive voters. They have hampered at corruption within the ranks of the Republican party, and called attention to their claim that the Republicans have not fulfilled their pledges of the past eight years particularly to the farmer.

Upon these two contentions has been based their demand that the Republican party be turned out of office.

STAGE And SCREEN

"MOTHER KNOWS BEST"

Love or a career? Which takes precedence?

That question is answered in a most dramatic way, in Fox Films "Mother Knows Best," featuring Madge Bellamy, Louise Dresser and Barry Norton and due at the Elite Theatre on Monday for five days' engagement.

"Mother Knows Best," is based on the widely read and internationally discussed story by Edna Ferber, said to be based on the actual lives of a famous stage star and her mother but actually just a similarity to a score of mothers and daughters dating back to Corinne and her mother, Jennie Kimball, a matter of a half century ago.

The picture reveals the transition of a stage child to a Broadway star with a theatre named after her. Through it all the daughter is merely a puppet with mother pulling the strings until the mother comes in contact with romance and awakening in the girl that there is something more in life than just the footlights. The battle is on with a surprising denouement.

"Mother Knows Best," capably directed by John Blystone, successful Fox director, brings to the screen as "Sally," the girl, a new Madge Bellamy, likewise a more brilliant than ever actress in Louise Dresser as the mother, as well as superb work by the entire supporting cast.

"HOME JAMES"

"Home James," Laura La Plante's new starring production for Universal, opened at Fischer's Appleton Theatre this afternoon to the tune of plenty of laughs and other sounds of enjoyment on the part of the audience.

Miss La Plante has an unusually good vehicle in "Home James," better even than most of her past successes. The blonde star is able to show her genius for comedy throughout the picture.

There are many scenes that are outstanding, notably that in which she puntonies her boss behind the frosted glass door of the office. Another is that in the rain when Charles Delaney, as the supposed chauffeur, saves her from a monster.

"Home James," is the story of a department store clerk, played by Miss La Plante, who comes to the big city to be an artist. Instead she sells art goods behind the counter of a large establishment in which she is merely a cog in the wheel.

Laura becomes the main cog, however, when she meets the boss' son, while the old man is away. Thinking him a chauffeur she permits herself to fall in love with him. The truth comes out after about five reels of fun. The boss permits the marriage, however, when he learns that Laura has made his son work harder than ever before.

Charles Delaney has an opportunity for a clever performance as the son, George Pearce is the father. Others in the capable cast are Allen Mannings, Joan Standing, Arthur Hoyt and Sidney Bracy.

Joe Shoer and his hand appears on the stage in new parts, playing for 3 new presentation acts.

REPUBLICANS PUT WATCHERS AT POLLS

The Outagamie-co. Republican committee has filed the names of 19 challengers who will watch at the polls, Tuesday, Nov. 6, according to Carl Becker, city clerk. The challengers have the privilege of accusing doubtful voters.

BADGERS "BEES" BEAT GOSLINGS

Run Up 19 Points in First Half and Then Coast to Win

Watertown, (AP)—On a wet, soggy playing field, the University of Wisconsin reserve football team easily defeated Northwestern college here Friday afternoon 19 to 0. Piling up their advantage in the first two periods the Badgers coasted along and chalked up their fourth successive victory, while the Goslings were losing their fifth game of the year.

After taking the ball to the 3 yard line, the opening period, a 15 yard punt for holding stayed off a Wisconsin touchdown soon after the kickoff. However the Cardinals came right back, and after Oman had recovered the ball in midfield, drove to a score. Oman made 20 yards, then a series of bucks took the ball to the two yard line where Mansfield plunged over. Rottman made the placement.

In the second period, Wisconsin scored on a series of plays from its own 40 yard line with Dunaway, Mansfield and Oman bearing the brunt of the attack, the full back making the score from the 3 yard line. The goal was missed.

The last Badger touchdown came in the same period, when Northwestern fumbled a punt and Wisconsin recovered on the Gosling 30 yard line. Elliott, who had substituted for Dunaway, tore off 20 yards and in three plays was over. The goal was missed again.

Northwestern was helpless throughout the game but in the last period unleashed a terrific pass attack that netted two first downs.

Stuhr, quarterback was the Gosling star, while Hammen, end, also played well.

JENSS CLOTHIERS COP MATCH FROM ACE'S FIVE

Appleton Aces lost their first match game with a local team when they hooked up with the Jensch Clothiers recently. The Clothiers ran off with all three games and counted 2,768 pins compared to the Aces' 2,658. Radtke and Kornetzke, with 640 and 624 pins, respectively swamped the Aces.

The scores:

JENSS CLOTHIERS—Won 3 Lost 0
Schiffner 180 208 178 566
Reinke 145 164 137 446
Kornetzke 160 158 174 492

TORNOW IN MID-SEASON FORM; BEATS 705 MAPLES

Sonny Tornow, member of Hopes Weiners five of the Fox River valley league rolled up what is probably one of the highest games rolled in the city, Friday. He totaled 255 pins for a single game and hit 705 for the three game series. The other scores were 216 and 234.

Hornsby Expected To Bring Someone Pennant

BY HENRY L. FARRELL
The gentlemen who own the Chicago and Boston National League clubs are trying as good business men to agree on what is a fair price for Rogers Hornsby.

For the purpose of getting some definite bargaining points, the negotiations it seems that the Chicago club placed a minimum value of $200,000 on the National League's greatest batter.

William Wrigley, who owns the Cubs, was told by his subordinates that cash alone would not buy the trader, and that some players would have to be thrown in to make the deal tasteful to the Boston customers.

Wrigley according to the story, then instructed his agents to start the cash conversation at $200,000 and use their own judgement on the weight of human stock that had to go along to boot.

The Braves are supposed to have mentioned casually that Maguire, Root and Webb would be treated kindly in Boston and there is $150,000 worth of material if you figure that an untired rookie as Roy Johnson is worth $75,000 of Detroit money.

It might be figured conservatively that in the initial stage of the bidding Hornsby is at least a $300,000 ball player and Chicago will not halt on a higher price if Boston will listen.

Baseball men are practically agreed that Hornsby would be too much of a bargain at $250,000 to get in a day when gifts are no part of the national pastime.

Manage Baltimore?

The Baltimore club is said to be on the market since the death of Jack Dunn, and mentioned prominently among those who may buy the club are the owners of the Philadelphia Athletics. Rumor has it that the A's will buy the club for use as a farm and that Eddie Collins shown here, will be put in charge of the team until the moment when he will take Connie Mack's place as manager of the Athletics.

WHITEWATER PEDS TIE OSHKOSH, 6-6

Dahlke Dashes 40 Yards for Sawdust City School's Touchdown

Whitewater—(AP)—On a soggy field, Whitewater and Oshkosh Normals battled to a 6 to 6 tie here Friday.

Evenly matched, the two teams started their game with a skirmish in midfield, then a cutback with Dahlke carrying the ball on a 40 yard slashing end run resulted in a touchdown for Oshkosh, but the kick was not made. Whitewater threatened in the second quarter, on a series of line bucks advancing 40 yards down the field, but was stopped on the Oshkosh ten-yard line the half ended in an exchange of punts.

Oshkosh came within a hair's breath of scoring again in the third period after a series of smash-downs the field coming within less than a foot of the goal but the southern ped's line held and Schwager punched out of danger.

Unless a flock of passes in the fourth period, Whitewater scored to knot the tally but failed on the kick. Olson made the touchdown. The game ended in a veritable rain of passes.

SENSATION IN TEXAS

Kenneth Olson, quarterback for Texas Christian University, is being hailed in that state as one of the best backs of the year. He was unstoppable in October games.

for the three game series. The other scores were 216 and 234.

INDIANS LIKE HORNSBY

Billy Brans says that his Cleveland club would lay $200,000 on the line without a tremble for Hornsby, but he knows that they couldn't get him out of the National League. The magnates are very wary in these days. Several years ago the Yankees had a checkbook to sell Pipp to the Cincinnati Reds for $200,000. They asked waiters and Philadelphia claimed him. Ed Barrow and Connie Mack went into a huddle and the circumstances were discussed. Mack said he guessed Pipp wasn't worth more than $7500 to him and withdrew the claim. Joe Hausner broke his leg that season and if Mack had Pipp to play first base he might have won the pennant.

There isn't a chance, of course, for Hornsby to get away from the National League. There are too many show horses in the American League now.

Cleveland offered Uhle, Sewell and $175,000 last winter and he took a laugh. Later the club offered $100,000 to Washington for Fucky Harris and was comforted with the admonition to be yourself.

PENNANT FOR CUBS
Babe Ruth cost the Yankees what at the time was the staggering price of $125,000 and he has returned a dividend of perhaps 200 per cent on the investment.

Hornsby wouldn't be any such investment for the Cubs, but it seems to be agreed baseball men that Hornsby ought to make a pennant runner out of the Cubs and that is what the Wrigley billions want.

It would mean something to the Wrigley firm to get a champion team because at some time during the period leading up to the world series some unethical reporter would violate a confidence and mention something about chewing gum. And if you think this is a sap notion get Sir Tommie Lupton if he didn't get all his dough back out of all those losing yacht races.

There will be one dissenting voice because at this time last year a cash appraisal of less than a dime was placed upon the great Ralph Jack Hendricks, manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

When the owners of the Giants decided that the club could prosper and be happy without Hornsby, Hendricks was summoned from Cincinnati and asked how much he would give for the man.

"Not a dime," Hendricks said. "In fact, I wouldn't have him on my ball club." But Hendricks will admit in his frank way that he has great personal distaste for the player and those personal prejudice have been known to operate at the cost of pennants.

Youngsters Have Worked Hard For Coming Battle

Locals Weakened When Coach Refuses to Let Truants Play

Several of the St. Joe junior high school gridder who naughty boys this week and as a result they can't play Sunday when the parochial youngster meet Cathedral junior high of Green Bay on the Wilson field. The locals therefore will be weakened for the battle and are picked to drop another game in the Catholic league.

Perhaps Coach Mel Hendritz will be in better humor Sunday when game time rolls around and may change his mind about the truants. If he does, his eleven has a chance of coming through after losing last week in a fracas they should have won by three touchdowns.

If any eleven ever has worked hard for a game, it's the St. Joe gridder. They laid off Monday night to rest their battered bodies but Tuesday went through one of the hardest workouts of the season remedying certain faults that showed themselves against Little Chute.

Wednesday was a repetition of Tuesday's session and Thursday the boys went out and scrimmaged against the high school eleven. The workout against the high huskies did considerable good and regardless the size of the Bays, they'll look comparatively small.

Just what kind of an outfit the northerners boast is not known. However, they have managed to win all the games they've played this season and therefore must be considered a first rate aggregation.

Coach Hendritz will depend pretty much on Connie Frank and his open field running to carry the St. Joe aggregation to victory. If the line will open up a few holes and the backs run interference as they've been taught there is no reason for Frank not making a few counters.

Grieshaber will call signals again Sunday while Beck will be fullback and Gehrmann right half. The latter was injured last week but he's feeling good now. The veteran Loessel will be center, Clem Rossmeyer and Captain Schneiderman, tackles, VanderLinden and Weber guards, Heldebrand and Steidl, ends.

GRAHAM BANTY CHAMP MANAGER DECLARES

Milwaukee—(AP)—"Bushy Graham is world's champion bantamweight and don't forget it" remarked William Parr, manager of the Little Albany fighter on his arrival from the East for his battle with Young Nationalist, at Philadelphia, November 7.

"The title belongs to Bushy and no one else at the present time," continued Mr. Parr. "On Feb. 4, 1927, in a championship match, Phil Rosenberg was 123½ pounds, but Bushy came in at the required scale—118 lbs. It was a close fight and the decision was given to Rosenberg, but under the conditions he lost just the same, having forfeited for being overweight."

"In February of this year we signed a contract with H. J. Fugazy to box Kid Frazz for the bantamweight championship of the world. Two weeks before Bushy knocked out Pete Zivic in four rounds at New York and then Francis declined to go on with the match for Mr. Fugazy. Francis would not make the match later and Corp. Lizz Schwartz was substituted and it was advertised as a title contest."

Graham won easily and the papers called him as champion of the class. But Taylor, having retired previously as a bantamweight, Graham will finish his training in Milwaukee for the match with Nationalist. A string of fine preliminaries are on the card and at popular prices.

PLAN 3-CENT GAS TAX
Montreal, N. Brunswick is considering raising the tax on gasoline to five cents per gallon, following the lead of Quebec and Ontario provinces, where the five-cent tax now is in operation.

A doctor says that if we eliminate nervousness we might wipe out some of the great inventors and discoverers. One of these probably is the man who originally found out that the carboard the lamp shades with your shirts is excellent to stuff into windows that rattle at night.

Chets Hot Band Valley Queen Sun, Another Big Time

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

LITHOUGH Michigan is a "bust in football" this year, it's wrestlers are the favorites to win the conference wrestling championship. The old stage coach at West Point has been condemned. And the victorious football players have to take their ride of triumph up the hill in a motor bus. Johnny Risko has raised his rate to grand per show. Al Schacht and Nick will stay with Walter Johnson in Washington. Although Bucky Harris wanted to take Al to Detroit with him. Hornsby will get a swell bonus to help moving expenses to Chicago. Bud Sprague, the Army captain, tried to find out who busted his nose with the first punch in the Harvard game.

We have read with much interest the item in a recent issue of the Neenah paper wherein members of the high school football team take the blame for their poor showing during the last two years. To us the letter says nothing and indicates the writers were poorly advised. Why they should admit they have been laying down on the job and why they finally are going to "play the game" after a two year loaf only adds to the mystery.

Should the team get down to business now it will show the coach either has been unable to handle the squad or that the boys have been quitting for reasons best known to themselves. The statement that the team can't think for themselves on a grid field is worse than the admission they haven't tried—most any youngsters with a few ounces of common sense soon see the way through the grid game as played in high schools.

If the Neenah boys finally come through with a couple wins persons who started the rumormongers to be congratulated and no doubt Coach Jorgensen will rest easier after the matter is settled. But in the meantime the persons who so readily make the admission they quit two years ago might enlighten Neenah fans with the reasons for their long sleep.

We've taken occasion to talk with men who have officiated in Neenah high games and they have pointed out numerous weaknesses in the line. Apparently too little attention has been paid to this particular department and as a result a gang of six footers, as for instance the squad representing Neenah last year, has often fallen before smaller fellows who know their football better.

LAWRENCE TRACK MEET

O. K'ED BY W. I. A. A.

Marquette—(AP)—Six athletic events in five high school sports have been granted by the Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic Association, Paul F. Neversman, Marquette, secretary, has announced, for 1929.

The meets received official permission as the Milwaukee county suburban league, while the sixth is to be staged by Lawrence college.

Lawrence will hold an interscholastic track meet May 17, at Appleton, while the suburban league track events are set for Milwaukee the day after.

The county league skating championships are to be held at Wauwau-tosa, Jan. 12; the tennis meets at Waukegan, June 1; the swimming championships at Cudahy, May 15, and gold supremacy will be decided at South Milwaukee, May 23.

North And South Set For Camp Randall Battle

Madison—(AP)—Two of the strongest teams that will meet in 1928 in inter-sectional football lined up here Saturday for an epochal contest, the University of Wisconsin representing the north and Alabama the south.

The Southerners arrived here late Friday, announced themselves in good condition and gave out word that weather or nothing else in particular was to bother them in their defensive play. The game was a magnet for 75,000 persons.

Rain which fell all day Friday merely ran off the big rubberized tarpaulin which had been spread upon the field, and cold weather was predicted for Saturday.

STAGG HOPES FOR UPSET
Chicago—(AP)—Battered by defeat in almost every game they have played this season, coach Amos Alonzo Stagg rallied his Chicago football forces together Saturday in a determined fight to repulse the invasion of their traditional inter-sectional gridiron foe, Pennsylvania, on Slaggy field.

The Maroon team was still weakened by injuries, but it was the strongest eleven Stagg had presented all season and it was out to provide an upset for the football world.

75,000 AT OHIO STATE
Columbus, O.—(AP)—Princeton came out west Saturday to play Ohio State, conqueror of three Big Ten eleven with only one great disputed touchdown to mar a great record of defensive play. The game was a magnet for 75,000 persons.

Rain which fell all day Friday merely ran off the big rubberized tarpaulin which had been spread upon the field, and cold weather was predicted for Saturday.

VETERANS LEAD WOMEN BOWLERS

Arcades No. 2 Tops Women's League After First Three Weeks

Veteran bowlers on the Women's City Bowling league teams are showing their superiority over other bowlers in the league as indicated by the averages for the first few weeks of the current season. S. Roubush tops the group with an average of 167.5 pins while E. Dunn follows in second place with 166.1 pins. Third and fourth places go to G. Koerner and V. Wenzloff, respectively.

Team standings show the Arcades No. 2, team leading the list with eight games won and one lost. The league teams have been bowling for three weeks.

vited to attend. Mid-week prayer meeting is held each Thursday evening at 7:30 in the church parlor, everyone cordially invited to come. On Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 the Ladies' union will hold its regular monthly meeting in the church parlor. Mrs. W. H. Whitney will lead the discussion on the 4th chapter in the studybook on "Friends in Africa." and Miss Elizabeth Wilson, returned Missionary from India, will speak on "The Day of Prayer." Mrs. W.
B. St. man will be hostess. Sunday morning Miss Carla Heller will sing, Sunday evening the chorus choir, with Mr. Emmons as soloist. A cordial invitation is extended to everyone to attend any or all of these means of grace.

Babson Says High Money Charges Affect Building

Babson Park, Mass. — "History clearly shows that the rates for money have a powerful influence on building and construction operations. In the past when interest rates have risen to high levels a decline in building has followed. Periods of plentiful money and reasonably low rates on the other hand, have accompanied all of the big construction booms of the past, including that which has been in progress for the past five years. In 1920, for illustration, there was a crying need for houses, stores, offices, apartments, public works, hospitals, and practically every kind of construction, except industrial plants. This urgent demand, however, was not sufficient to force a building revival at that time, simply because interest rates were at prohibitive levels. By 1922, however, rates had declined and active building operations began.

"This huge construction volume has continued, with only slight occasional recessions, up to August, 1928. The tightening in the money situation has now begun to show its influence. August building totals, as reported by F. W. Dodge Co., dropped off 11 per cent from July, whereas August is normally a much better month than July. This decline was the first indication of any halt in the rapid upward movement. Of course, it does not necessarily mean that all building is on the toboggan.
In fact, the September figures showed contracts higher than August and also 15 per cent higher than September, 1927. Analysis of the September results, however, show that the increase was due to five or six single big industrial projects valued from $5,000,000 to $40,000,000 each. There was no general increase.

"Residential building was fractionally lower than in September, 1927; public works and public utilities were 5 per cent lower; social and recreational building, 30 per cent lower; stores, offices, and industrial buildings, 1 per cent lower.
Memorial buildings, 31 per cent lower.

"The slowing up in most types of building in August and September does not, of course, preclude the possibility of larger total volume for 1928 as a

THIS HAS HAPPENED
SYBIL THORNE, pampered and beautiful, is on her way to Havana with MABEL BLAKE, social worker and spinster. Sybil, weary with life and love, has taken the trip in order to find the peace necessary for a decision regarding CRAIG NEW-HALL, who has asked her to marry him.

Craig is a fine fellow, but Sybil finds herself unable to dismiss the phantom of her soldier-lover—JOHN LAWRENCE, who went to France with the A. E. F. and never returned. Mabel, on the other hand, is frankly man hunting.

The steward comes to their cabin to present the captain's compliments and asks if the ladies would care to join MR. ARNOLD and MR. EUSTIS in the commander's cabin for bridge. Mabel, who has already met Eustis, becomes wildly excited and borrows Sybil's clothes in order to make an impression.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XII

Captain Hanna was short and fat and jolly, with a rolling gait and a big, loud laugh.

John Arnold was a pudgy little man and the hair on the top of his head was thin and getting thinner. He had a small black mustache and a sharp little nose and a tremendous chin. Mr. Arnold was an antique dealer.

Richard Eustis was tall and slim. His hair was light brown and wavy. He wore it rather long and had a habit of shaking it back from his forehead impatiently. His eyes were blue and his skin very pale. His mouth was well-shaped, with lips so vivid they almost seemed to have been carmined. He had a crooked little whimsical smile and one eyebrow quirked up when he talked.

"He looks," thought Sybil, "like a hungry poet. I'll bet Mabel would like to cook him a good meal and run her fingers through his hair."

Arnold was one of those people who love to find mutual acquaintances.

"So you come from Boston?" he queried. "Now I used to know a lot of people in Boston. I'm from New Haven myself. Let's see—do you know George Tracy? And the Osgood?—the lovely woman people. You don't? Well, now, that's strange. I suppose you know Mrs. Young—Mrs. Leon Young? Fine old lady."

Eustis was quieter.

"I've asked the steward to bring up Martinis," he said. "Perhaps you had rather have something else?"

Mabel was trying desperately to look sophisticated.

"I simply adore them!" she exclaimed.

And when they came she whispered excitedly to Sybil, "Do you eat the foolish olive, or let it lay?"

The captain had left.

"Make yourselves at home," he told them. "I'll be in later."

Eustis, presently, began to devote himself to Sybil. Arnold had Mabel in a cozy corner, chatting of Sandwich glasses.

"I've a precious dolphin candlestick I'd like to give you," Sybil heard him say, while Mabel looked as if she would like to choke him.

In vain Sybil tried to make the conversation four-sided. Eustis could be positively rude.

"I'm fed up on antiques," he announced. "And John can't talk about anything else. I'm grateful to you, Mabel, for taking him off my hands. By the Lord Henry, I needed a little respite. And now, since we're well rid of John, suppose you and I take a little stroll. Miss Thorne, there's a glorious moon tonight."

"But I thought we were going to play bridge."

"And waste a perfectly good moon!"

"But I'd been anticipating such a nice little game. I'm crazy about bridge, Mr. Eustis."

Mabel, in the corner, interrupted her loquacious companion.

"Run along, Sib, it's too lovely a night for cards. Take my scarf to throw over your shoulders and don't forget to wish on the moon."

"What did I tell you?" she muttered under her breath, as she flung a bit of flowered chiffon across Sybil's shoulders and grinned despairingly.

They were scarcely out of hearing when Eustis turned to Sybil.

"You wouldn't break up an antique twosome like that, would you?" he demanded.

"Why, what do you mean?"

"Oh, your chaperon and my pest there, discussing spinets and low-boys, like a couple of old cronies. Antique fanatics give me a pain."

"Nab isn't a fanatic and she isn't my chaperon. She's a perfect peach and she's lady enough not to show it when she's bored to death. And if antique fanatics give you a pain, why are you going to Havana with Mr. Arnold?"

"Oh, I'm only a struggling young man, fair lady. Poor, but honest—and John's parents are vulgarly wealthy. Besides, I'm good company for him. When he proposed the trip I jumped at the chance. All clever men are opportunists."

"He drew her arm a little closer."

"You don't like me, do you, Miss Thorne?"

She caught the whimsy of his little crooked smile. . . . and his eyebrow quirked so quizzically.

"I don't think anything at all about you," she said impatiently.

"But you think I'm rude," he persisted.

"Yes, I do—horribly rude."

"You know you're an awfully attractive girl, Miss Thorne."

"You know you're not a bit original, Mr. Eustis."

"Well, well!" He laughed heartily. It was a very nice laugh, full of honest mirth.

"All right, fair one. I won't talk like a sap any longer. My mistake. I had an idea, all girls liked that line. Here's a new one for you. I've made love to a lot of girls, Sybil Thorne, and it didn't mean a thing. But starting tonight, everything I say goes. You won't believe me, yet. That doesn't make any difference. I'm crazy about you, Sybil. And I'm going to make you love me. Now what do you think of that, Haughty Lady?"

"Well—since you ask me—I think you must be insane, Mr. Eustis. That's just between ourselves, of course. I won't tell a soul. I think you're absolutely cuckoo."

"Why? . . . Because I'm crazy about you?"

"But you don't even know me."

"That doesn't make any difference. Love is a creed with me. I know more about love than any man you ever knew. I've given it more thought. I've studied it as a scientific thing. Some day I'm going to write a book and call it Love."

"You must send me an autographed copy."

"I'll dedicate it to you."

"Idiot."

"Darling!" . . . His arms closed tight around her.

She threw back her head, but he found her lips with his. She strained away, taut and angry. His body against hers was trembling. His hair had fallen across her forehead. Soft, blond hair, beautiful in the moonlight. His eyes blazed into hers. He held her with arms that felt like steel. Then he took his mouth away, and whispered against her lips.

"Kiss me."

Obediently she relaxed, and her body became soft and clinging. He freed her arms and she put them about his neck.

"Yes," she said.

Then it was over. He stood with his hands on the rail, and she noticed how white his knuckles were under the fair skin.

They were scarcely out of hearing when Eustis turned to Sybil.

"You wouldn't break up an antique twosome like that, would you?" he demanded.

"Why, what do you mean?"

"Oh, your chaperon and my pest there, discussing spinets and low-boys, like a couple of old cronies. Antique fanatics give me a pain."

LATEST NEWS OF THE AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY

TEST VICTORY SIX ON STEEP GRADES

Dodge Brothers Obtain Composite Performance Record in Survey

Automobile hill climbing feats, heretofore confined to certain mountains, have been nationalized by Dodge Brothers in a series of tests to obtain a composite picture of Victory Six performance. Paved and unpaved inclines throughout the country, known to native motorists as "Show Me" grades, were picked to test the Victory's ability. All records were made by different cars and drivers under varied conditions. Some of these follow:

In Pennsylvania, the Victory Six started at the foot of the famous Uniontown hill in high gear with a speed of 18 miles an hour. The three-mile climb to the summit around sharp curves and up grades of more than nine per cent was finished in high gear at 42 miles an hour.

Lookout Mountain near Chattanooga, Tenn., was the scene of another test in which the Victory carried the driver and four passengers up the 4 1/2-mile climb in eight minutes. The winding highway to the top leads to an altitude of 2,900 feet and the entire trip was made in high gear, the speed at some points reaching 45 miles an hour.

In the Rockies, Cheyenne Mountain, towering 9,200 feet above sea level, was easily conquered with a car load of passengers without the use of low gear. The road to the top is six miles long and reverse turns make the climb unusually difficult.

Corey Hill, known to every Boston motorist and many tourists, was negotiated in high gear all the way. The rises 137 feet in 2,000 feet of highway, and at one point the grade is more than 15 per cent.

New York reported a test run up Fort George Hill, which is 440 of a mile long with a 9 1/2 degree grade at the bottom and 11 degrees at the top. The start was made at five miles an hour in high gear at the bottom, and the car speed reached 25 miles an hour at the summit.

It required just four minutes for the Victory to negotiate the two-mile winding highway up Mt. McGregor in New York State. The speed at the top was 25 miles an hour. Steep grades and hairpin turns make the climb unusually difficult.

Ascending Stone Mountain near Atlanta, Ga., proved a novel but successful venture. There is no road to the summit, and at one point it was necessary to go up a rock incline with a 25 per cent grade.

Various drivers making the test noted the ease of handling and low center of gravity—permitting safe speed on turns, as ranking next to engine performance in establishing the records.

HYDRAULIC PRESS IS USED TO MAKE TIRES

Vulcanized Casings in Steel Molds Placed in Heaters Resembling Boilers

Huge hydraulic presses, capable of 1,151,200 pounds pressure, used to close the molds in which tires are vulcanized, are one of the most interesting divisions of equipment in the factory at Akron where Miller tires are made. By the movement of a lever that a child can operate, great hydraulic rams 39 inches in diameter exert a pressure of 1,600 pounds to the square inch.

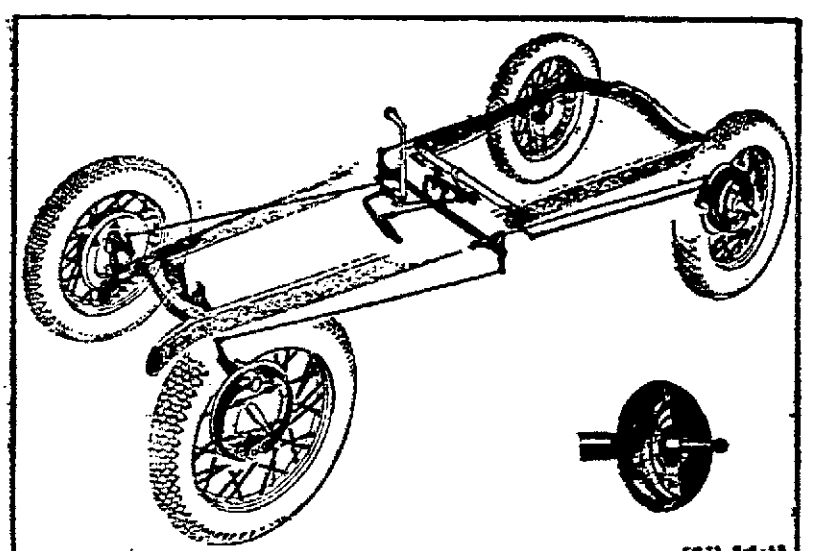

Tires are vulcanized in heavy steel molds placed in large heaters that resemble upright boilers. As fast as the heaters are emptied of molds in which tires have been vulcanized, they are filled again. Molds are transported to and from the heaters by conveyors, and the tires are taken from the molds and now ones put into them for vulcanizing while they are in motion. Molds are filled with tires, pressed in the huge presses, vulcanized and emptied in a never ending circle. Only slight pauses are made when the line. Correct vulcanizing is assured by a variation of less than two degrees in any part of the heaters.

Tire filled molds are raised and lowered in the heaters by an operation similar to the working of the huge presses. The mere movement of a small lever raises or lowers the great "stack" of molds in the heaters to any distance. As molds are stacked in the heaters they are lowered so that the top of the stack is level with the mouth of the heater. When the vulcanizing process has been completed, the molds are raised from the heater in the same manner.

The Appleton Tire Shop, 218 East College Avenue is the local dealer and distributor.

Six-Brake System on Model A Ford

THIS diagram illustrates design of six-brake system of new Model A Ford car. All six brakes operate on wheels of car, service brakes on all four wheels and parking or emergency brakes on the two rear wheels. Dark brake rods in the diagram show service brake system, while the light ones indicate emergency system. Inset shows cut-away section close-up of a rear brake, showing two separate bands on a two-in-one drum, one for service brakes and one for emergency.

TRAFFIC stops when the gridiron signal is "Let's Go" in hundreds of football camps over the country. Helmed warriors fight on while the sideline visitor, a Dodge Brothers Senior Six sport coupe, rolls up as a counter attraction to the thrilling spectacle of end runs and off tackle smashes.

DRIVING RECORD BROKEN BY WOMAN

Makes Trans-continental Trip in Chevrolet in Eight Days, Eight Hours

It was perhaps only fitting that during the same year that a woman for the first time flew the Atlantic another woman should record what is claimed to be the all-time woman's record for a transcontinental automobile journey. At any rate, Miss Telle Glyndon, of Atlantic City, driving a Chevrolet sedan, completed on September 9th, the 3,468 miles that separate her native city from San Francisco. The expired time for her "non-stop" journey was eight days, eight hours and 15 minutes.

Miss Glyndon was accompanied on her journey by her brother-in-law, and a friend, neither of whom has ever driven an automobile. Alone, it was up to her to drive every inch of the distance, and this she did.

"It was an endurance test solely," she explained when she checked in at the San Francisco ferry. "I did it to prove that woman's endurance is as great as man's and I think the result of my journey has done this."

Miss Glyndon's trip was given official endorsement by Mayor Anthony M. Ruffo, Jr., of Atlantic City, who timed her start and bade her bon voyage with messages of greeting and the official key of Atlantic City for delivery to Mayor Rolph, of San Francisco.

"I got so sleepy at times, especially the third night out, that I thought I would have to quit," Miss Glyndon said. "I don't feel as though I ever again want to drink a cup of coffee or inhale from a bottle of smelling salts."

"It was the detours that delayed us. Out of Pittsburgh was a terrible stretch of road, necessitating a long detour. Also, in certain sections of the far west, we encountered more than one heart-breaking detour."

Not once during the trip did Miss Glyndon enter a hotel for food or sleep. Ten minute naps at the wheel sufficed for rest. Sandwiches and coffee eaten with one hand, while the other steered, were her only refreshments. She is an experienced driver, and for the last six years has driven Chevrolets exclusively. Just before the trip she purchased a new sedan and drove it 1,200 miles before starting on her record-breaking journey. The only stops the car required were those made to take on gasoline, oil and water. No change of tires or adjustments of any description were necessary.

REO WOLVERINE EXPLORES LAKES

Land of 10,000 Lakes Beckons to Motorist in Summer or Winter

MINNESOTA—home of Minnehaha and Minnetonka, long famous in going and story—beckons to the motorist in summer and winter. Set as it is in the center of the United States it is easily reached from every state in the Union. The Yellowstone Trail, reaching across the country from Boston to Portland, as well as the Lincoln Highway, brings you to Minnesota, via highways connecting northward.

A highway system embracing more than 100,000 miles of roads taught they meant "the land of the sky-tinted water"—and it was aptly named.

GATEWAY TO TOURING PARADISE

Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minnesota's Twin Cities, are gateways into the land of Ten Thousand Lakes. The former city boasts of some half million population and its distinctive among cities of the United States in its varied scenic attractions. Eight lakes with beautiful drives are within the city, and summer and winter sports are enjoyed—bathing, sailing, canoeing and fishing in summer and ice-boating and skating in winter.

Minnehaha Falls, immortalized by Longfellow's "Hiawatha" is an object of interest to all tourists and is located nearby, while Fort Snelling on the Mississippi recalls the early history of the state.

St. Paul, east of Minneapolis, is the capital—a city of charm built on seven hills. St. Paul is surpassed by leads you to scenic spots in this northern state. Laughing and gurgling waterfalls recall the ancient Indian legends—an improvised pillow of pine needles, and a night beneath the stars in one of Minnesota's mighty forests gives you a new lease on life—fishing, hunting and outdoor sports await you in this land that boasts of ten thousand lakes.

"Ten Thousand Lakes" is not a catch-phrase—for within the borders of Minnesota there are more than this number of lakes, ranging in size from small crystal clear pools to great inland seas fifty miles in length. Each has a distinct appeal and charm. Some are near cities, while others are in the fastnesses of the back country, seldom seen except by the hardy travelers over the canoe trails. When the Redmen called this region "Minne-Soo," no city for park sites commanding extensive and picturesque views. In the very heart of the business district are five parks, while in the residential sections are three public parks with facilities for boating and bathing.

When Pierre Parrant suspended trading with his Indian neighbors for a few days and heaved enough logs from the forest-fringed banks of the Mississippi to build his crude little cabin, he had little thought that he was establishing the site of a future city—gateway to a veritable paradise for tourists.

Indian Mounds Park is a group of historic mounds used as burial place of the dead chiefs, by the Sioux Indians. From the park, across the Mississippi Valley, the beautiful panoramic view of St. Paul is inviting.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR CARS FROM SPAIN

Spanish Government Has Ambitious Plans for Development of Highways

Spain is to become a rival of the United States in its utilization of the automobile in the opinion of Luis Carreras, Spanish distributor of Packard cars. While in Detroit for a visit at the Packard factory Mr. Carreras told of the plans his government has for the development of good roads so that wider use can be made of motor cars throughout the whole country.

Under the leadership of Premier Rivera, $100,000,000 has been appropriated by the Spanish government as a start on a comprehensive plan of road building and maintenance which will cover all Spain. The money now appropriated, said Mr. Carreras, will be expended in the construction of 4,500 miles of the most modern highways that can be built. Financing is to be done entirely out of the government treasury without further taxation.

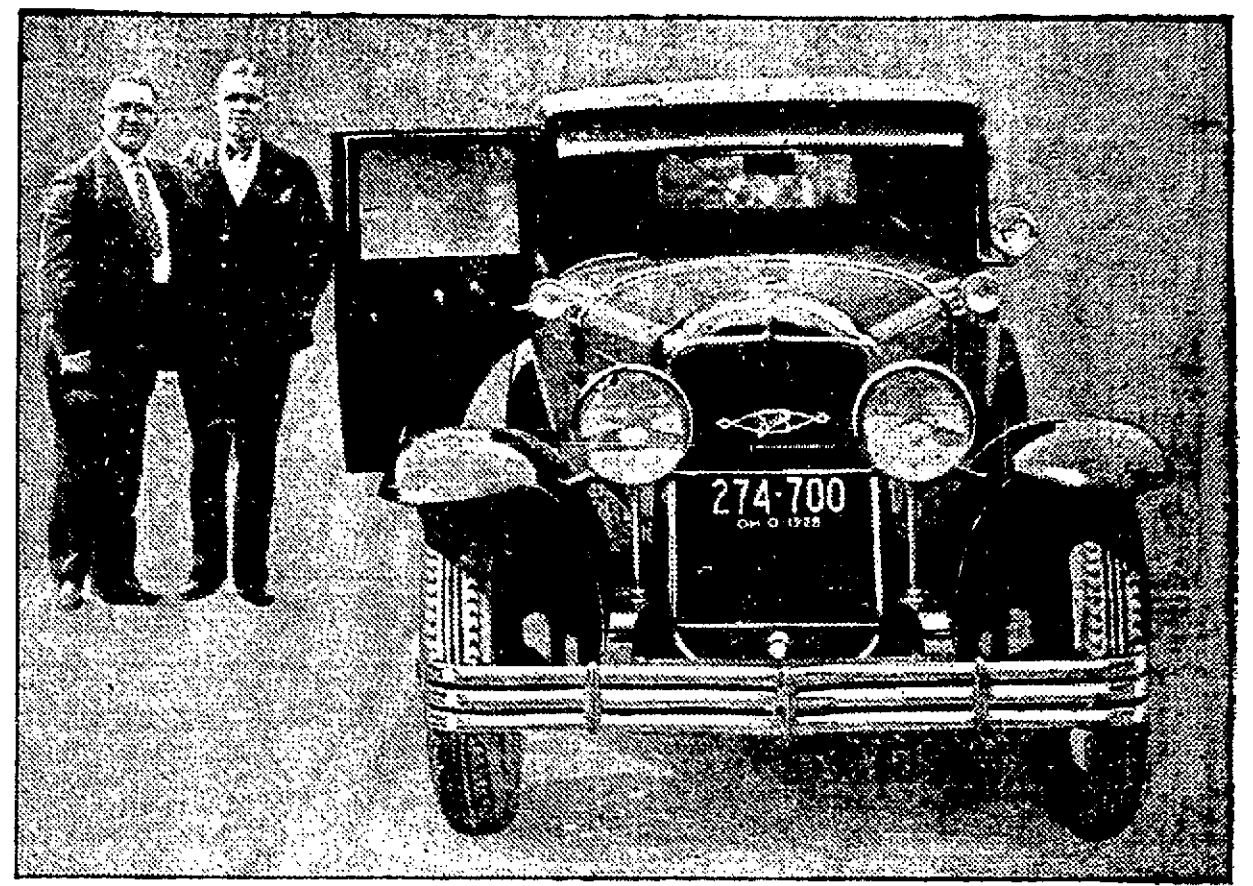

Roads to be built at once will form a great system of highways which are to become the main arteries of the entire country. The system will be known as the Circuito Nacional. Practically the whole map of picturesque old Spain will be opened to the motorist when the great task has been completed.

"The automobile, our people recognize, is a means of rapid transportation," said Mr. Carreras, "and we are not going to shackle it with a patchwork system of traffic regulation and speed limits. A driver may go as fast or as slow as he likes. To permit fast travel from one city to another sharp turns are to be eliminated and all necessary curves will be banked."

"The idea of by-pass roads around cities, advocated first some years ago by President Macaulay of the Packard company, is going to be used to avoid towns where traffic congestion would occur. Crossings will be closed automatically, the roadways will be wide, grades made easy and the surface will be hard and smooth. Everything is to be done to make possible maximum speed with minimum danger."

"Luminous signs will mark the curves to lesson the danger in night driving. Advertising boards have

COMPLETE DESIGN PROTECTS HUDSON

Feature Enables Motorist to Maintain Motor at Its Highest Efficiency

One deserving feature of Hudson design is the means offered the motorist of maintaining the motor at its highest efficiency. This is important in itself, but even more so in adding to the motor's life.

At the very front of the car will be seen the shutters. Hudson has used them for more than ten years. Now they are coming into almost universal use among the highest priced cars, and are recognized by engineers as the most efficient means of controlling temperature.

MOTOR EFFICIENCY CONTROLLED

Their exclusive advantage is that they shut all drafts of air from the motor while it is warming up; other heat-controlling devices work only on the water in the motor block. Especially in cold weather it is important to warm the whole compartment under the hood very shortly after the car starts. Also, once the car is operating the shutters may be adjusted so as to keep the motor always at its most efficient temperature. The motor heat indicator on dash gives the driver a complete guide in doing this.

The Hudson carburetion system is provided with separate adjustments for all conditions of driving. For starting it is advisable that the fuel mixture be heated for thorough vaporization. But when the motor itself has become heated another mixture is more effective. Hudson provides for all phases of this changing requirement.

The owner will not wish to go into the principles of carburetion; nor need he, for on the dash is an indicator which fully instructs him what to do for the best results. A hand located conveniently by governs the whole operation.

As with the shutters the right heat in the carburetion system is important. It adds fuel efficiency and economy and by supplying the right fuel mixture it avoids and well-known evils of unvaporized gasoline and oil dilution. These devices help the motorist keep his car at its best.

The Hudson motor in its fundamental design, is highly efficient in the use of fuel, but these devices are additional and highly valuable safeguards. They are typical of the thoroughness of Hudson engineering.

With highways of increasing excellence, automobile control becomes increasingly important. Meeting new demands for improved control by experienced drivers, both men and women. Hudson has adopted a type of braking which has been thoroughly tested both in high speed bus service and on leading passenger cars. It is of the three shoe Bendix type, self-energizing that is, the forward motion of the car is utilized to aid in the application of the brakes, thereby reducing necessary brake pedal pressure.

Steering, too, is of an improved anti-friction design. A hardened disc mounted between roller bearings takes the place of one set of gears in the conventional design, and liberal use of anti-friction bearings at other points gives a welcome ease of steering.

In these and other ways Hudson offers permanent and practical advantages in ownership.

"Famous First Ladies"

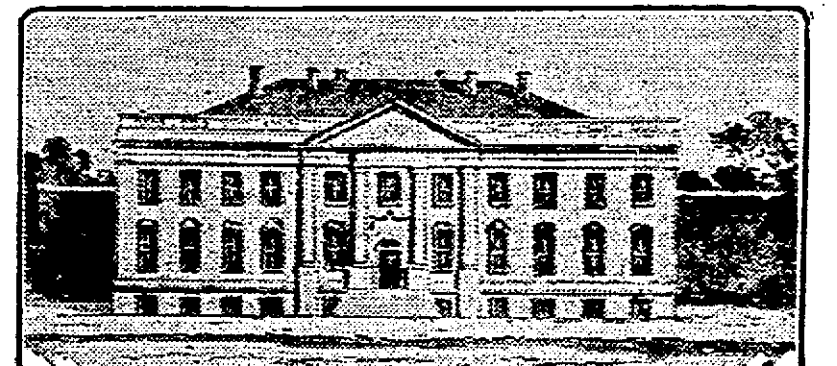

The rooms of the White House overflow with memories of the hostesses who, as the wives of presidents, have dispensed the hospitality of the nation. We never can speak of the White House without seeing in our minds visions of those women whose names are interwoven with its history. Some writers say the name of the White House owes its origin to Martha Washington.

There is a story that the White House was so named in honor of the country seat where Washington had gone to claim his bride.

Other stories say it was named the White House because it was painted white to hide the smokestains on the walls after the British burned it in 1814.

The first White House, pictured here, built in 1800, was not finished when Washington's second term expired. When Washington was inaugurated the first time, the seat of government was in New York City. There in a large old-fashioned house, Mrs. Washington held her levees. With the aid of Alexander Hamilton she established strict rules of etiquette for her drawing rooms. (To Be Continued)

E. DE PERE ELEVEN WHIPS NEW LONDON BY 19 TO 6 SCORE

Passes Help Pave Way to Victory by Scrappy Visiting Eleven

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—The East DePere Red and Whites handed Bergland's team a 19 to 6 defeat Friday afternoon. They showed the home team and fans a fancy shift or two, brought a fairly heavy line and a snappy, quick moving back field, and took home the high school's last chance to go over the 500 per cent mark. This was the last game of the season, but next year is coming, and Bergland's boys will be the same scrappy bunch with a year's added experience. East will lose about three-fourths of her players through graduation. With Sofia the only letter man on the team this year the Red and Whites have taken three out of seven games, for a 42.9 per cent average in the conference standings.

New London's lone touchdown came from a long heave by Burton to "Minnow" Brown, who scampered the remaining 15 yards over the line. East's touchdowns came when Lee, a half, crashed over from the four yard line late in the second quarter. By line smashes, a pass, and a double pass East went over again in the third quarter. An intercepted pass by a De Pere back, who ran 50 yards finished up the scoring for the day. On the kickoff De Pere's coach sent in his second team, who finished the game by intercepting Burton's pass, fumbling on the next play, and gave the ball to New London on the Red and White's 15 yard line, just before the end of the game. Only one penalty was called during the game by Referee Reed, De Pere being penalized 15 yards for holding. De Pere tried four passes, three of them successful and these paved the way for touchdowns. New London tried seven passes, three of them good, and one giving them their touchdown. New London only managed a few first downs to the up river boys' eight. De Pere intercepted three passes, one giving them a touchdown on a 50 yard run.

INTERCEPT PASS
Both teams were forced to punt six times, and on the fumbles New London had a clear slate, while De Pere had three.

Weidenbeck local center, played a strong defensive game, snatching up five or six plays before the half. DePere tried seven passes, three of them good, and one giving them their touchdown. New London only managed a few first downs to the up river boys' eight. De Pere intercepted three passes, one giving them a touchdown on a 50 yard run.

BUTLER ADDRESSES DEMOCRATIC MEETING

New London Attorney Scores Record of Republican Administrations

New London—Any disappointment first felt in the failure of S. Ryan Duffy, Fond du Lac attorney to appear, according to the arrangement made through the Milwaukee branch of the National Democratic committee, at a Democratic rally here on Friday night vanished as Attorney William J. Butler, substituted speaker, warmed to his subject. Mr. Butler gave a splendid version of his party's candidate and his merits, and succeeded well in carrying his audience with him to the end of his hour's discourse.

In a review of the present party's record of farm relief measures, Mr. Butler stated that the same promises made in 1920 and 1924 are again being made now by the Republicans, and that the same "relief" to farmers enjoyed from these past promises will be the probable outcome of the present pledges. The speaker read excerpts from various Republican papers showing that conditions admitted by the party since prohibition has been in force point to no solution if continued. He ridiculed Klan and Anti-Saloon league, calling them twin calamities and stating that each is maintaining a lobby in Washington coercing congressmen who voted dry and whose actions when seen by others were decidedly wet. The speaker suggested that were every man or woman who had indulged in the use of either beer or wine since prohibition went into effect were to vote for Hoover.

From the subject of immigration Mr. Butler switched to the oil scandal, charging candidate Hoover with full knowledge of the project and its developments. He also mentioned that some Republican votes will not be cast for Hoover, because the voters are in Europe and cannot return for election day. He alluded to history taking his listeners back to the Peck administration, recalling that Peck was elected to clean house after the Republican Spooner regime. He touched upon the Muscle Shoals project and concluded by drawing a vivid comparison between the two candidates.

The meeting was held at the Grand Opera house, with the high school band furnishing music during the interval preceding the address.

FUNERAL FOR CHILD

New London—Funeral services for the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schoenrock were held from the Arnold Magrath home Saturday afternoon, the Rev. Adolph Schiering officiating. THE BIG PARADE GOES ON! October 100% ahead of last October

And now the tenth successive month in Willys-Overland's record-breaking year—October, with sales of Whippet and Willys-Knight motor cars showing a gain of 100% over sales for October, 1927.

The chain is still unbroken—each month of 1928 has set a higher sales figure than its corresponding month of the preceding year, from January right through October.

This dramatic advance is conclusive proof of the sound quality and full value of the Whippet Four, the Whippet Six and the Willys-Knight Six—low quality and value are the rock-bottom essentials for such sweeping nationwide success.

Natural Girlish Figures Replacing Slender Style

Madison—(P)—Days of dieting are passing, and natural girlish figures are returning, for slenderness is going out of style and curves are coming back, according to Miss Marion Jusius of the University of Wisconsin department of home economics.

Parisian designers are predicting the return of the normal waist line and curves are being suggested by side drapes and flares. The drape effect may be on the front or even on the back of the dress. The opinion of these makers of fashions seem to be divided as to whether or not capes are smart.

"The French keep about a year ahead of us in our styles for clothing and accessories," Miss Jusius said. "At the present time Brown is the predominant color in America while in France black is being worn almost entirely. Brown is passe in Paris."

"The French are not wearing the gold necklaces so popular there two years ago, but instead are adorning themselves with one long string or two or three short strings of beads, preferably pearls. Our Parisian sisters are wearing no make-up, with the exception of a light covering of powder."

"For sports wear, the French designers advise the short skirt with a narrow belted sweater blouse, a Cardigan light jacket and a kerchief complete the picture. The plain jersey or the printed sweater with pyramids and squares or huge colored dots go well with the abbreviated skirt."

"The daytime ensemble of printed velvet or a combination of velvet and wool is still good. There is more formality and elaboration of cut to the ensemble this year and is usually trimmed with a fur which may be either flat or fluffy type. Paris is advocating tailored suits and tailored coat type of dress, accompanied by large fox fur, for fall wear. The coat linings match the gown in color and design."

"For our afternoon and evening dresses there is a tendency towards the silhouette of the 1850," says Miss Jusius.

"The skirts for evening wear especially, are much longer and the frills are going from front to back. The faded right now seems to be a suggestion of a slight puff in the skirt. Stiff materials predominate while the hem lines are uneven to give the effect of a trail."

The shoes, according to Dame Fashion, are simple in design and often match the gown in color; the darker autumn shades in tan and grays are being worn in hosiery. Fur pieces and the small hats are the style again this fall, the center of interest being on the side of the hat.

FINISH GROUP OF AIRPLANE MAPS

Work Covers Three Lakes Region in Vilas, Forest, and Oneida-cos

Madison—(P)—Wisconsin's first quadrangle of authentic airplane maps have been completed, according to E. F. Bean, state geologist, following a final ground survey of the United States Geological Survey.

The district mapped covers the Three Lakes region and includes part of Vilas, Forest and Oneida-cos. Carried out as an experiment to determine the feasibility of plane mapping, this series in the opinion of Mr. Bean should mark the first step towards a program of extensive air-mapping of northern Wisconsin.

Topographer Staack in his ground verification work found that airplane data made excellent base maps.

Striking differences between old government survey maps of the three lakes region and these new base maps were found by Mr. Bean. A large number of hitherto unmaped lakes are now shown, while the early topographer's markings of lake shorelines have proved to be almost entirely inaccurate. The airplane cameras are remarkable in their ability to register the smallest details, clearly picturing the beds of old rivers, various zones at present lakeshores, draining ditches, pipe lines, and even differences in fields under cultivation.

According to calculations made by Mr. Bean, 35 quadrangles about 7,000 square miles or less than two cents an acre. Since the federal government pays half the cost the next cost to the state would be about $5 a square mile, or less than one cent an acre.

The inadequacy of the maps now in the possession of the state department of geology is attested by the fact that University of Wisconsin scientists have collected data on lakes which are shown on the geologist's maps. In many instances the best maps of the northern part of the state, for recreational purposes are those printed in folders distributed by railway companies.

If the dawn of history means when man first appeared on earth, and that is imagined to have been 12 hours ago, then our known history is only five minutes long.

The Big Parade GOES ON! October 100% ahead of last October

And now the tenth successive month in Willys-Overland's record-breaking year—October, with sales of Whippet and Willys-Knight motor cars showing a gain of 100% over sales for October, 1927.

The chain is still unbroken—each month of 1928 has set a higher sales figure than its corresponding month of the preceding year, from January right through October.

This dramatic advance is conclusive proof of the sound quality and full value of the Whippet Four, the Whippet Six and the Willys-Knight Six—low quality and value are the rock-bottom essentials for such sweeping nationwide success.

SCHNEIDER AFRAID OF KLAN, OPPONENT SAYS IN TALK HERE

McGillan Praises Hoover
but Says He Will Vote for Al Smith

Congressman George J. Schneider will not endorse Alfred E. Smith for the presidency because he is afraid he will lose the 1,200 votes of the Ku Klux Klan in Outagamie county, James H. McGillan, Green Bay mayor and Democratic candidate for congress from the Ninth district, charged in a campaign speech before more than 200 people at Eagle's hall Friday night.

"Why don't Schneider say he is for Smith?" Mayor McGillan demanded. "He has not voted for any bill Hoover ever wanted passed and he didn't support Harding or Coolidge and he doesn't expect any Hoover votes."

The Democratic nominee further charged that Congressman Schneider erroneously had claimed Senator John J. Blaine was coming to the Ninth district to support him. Mayor McGillan said he had a long dis- tance to travel with Senator Blaine in which the senator declared most emphatically that he was not coming to the Ninth district to speak.

Paying a glowing tribute to Herbert Hoover as a man Mayor McGillan said that he was supporting Al Smith because he is a wonderful executive and a man of the people. His political enemies have combed his public record for 25 years and cannot find a spot on it, he said.

"I am for Al Smith because he comes from the working people and the country needs the example of a working man in the president's chair."

Mayor McGillan declared that if he is elected he will help find a sane solution of the prohibition question, which, he claimed, sensible people admit is in need of a solution.

12 ARE FINED FOR TRAFFIC OFFENSES

Police Continue Drive to Enforce 90-minute Parking Limit Ordinance

Twelve traffic law violators were fined in municipal court Saturday morning by Judge Theodore Berg when they pleaded guilty of charges against them.

Lester A. Versteegen, 327 E. Water-st., George Long, 745 W. Prospect-ave, Arthur Pahl, 327-N. Linwood-ave, James Ball, 508 S. Cherry-st., Theodore Whalen, 28 Bellaire-ct., J. A. Janssen, 1616 N. Morrison-st., and Gilbert Thomsen, Neenah, were fined $1 and costs each for violating the 90-minute parking law ordinance in effect on College-ave. They were arrested Friday by Officer William Lockery.

Kenneth McCoy, route 2, Appleton, was fined $1 and costs for parking his car in a restricted zone near a fire hydrant. He was arrested by Fred Arndt, motorcycle officer.

W. J. LaVerque, 1208 N. Morris-son-st. and W. J. Sommers, 1162 S. Jefferson-st. were fined $1 and costs each for parking cars within re-stricted spaces at street intersections. They were arrested by Officer Gus Hersekorn. Leonard Utschig, route 6, Appleton, was fined $10 and costs for speeding 45 miles an hour on N. Appleton-st. He was arrested by Of- ficer Hersekorn.

FOUR PERSONS HURT ON WAY TO GRID GAME

Catlin Car Overturms in Ditch Near Rosendale
Saturday Morning

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Catlin and Mr. and Mrs. James A. Catlin, all of Appleton, were cut and bruised about 10:30 Saturday morning when the Catlin automobile, speeding to the football game at Madison, skidded off the highway and tipped over against a fence on Highway 26, near Rosendale.

Mr. Catlin was cut and bruised and it is feared several ribs were broken. She was taken to a physi- cian at Rosendale. Mr. Catlin was cut about the face; Mrs. Wood's wrist was sprained and Mr. Wood was cut about the ankle.

The car was quite badly dam- aged. Other motorists helped right the car and extricate the injured.

Saturday night Mr. Rooney is to talk at a rally in Bear Creek and that meeting will end the public campaign of the county Democratic organization.

LARGE CROWD HEARS ENGLISH ORGANIST IN RECITAL HERE

Professor, Fellow of Royal College of England, Makes Hit With Audience

Professor William C. Webb, Fellow of the Royal College of Organists, England, appeared in his first Ap- pleton recital before a large crowd at the Methodist church Friday eve- ning. The organist, who played with great ease, accomplished throughout the program a fine bal- ance of tone qualities through his excellent registration.

Outstanding numbers were Sonata in A Minor by Borowski, Vorspiel from Wagner's Parsifal and In a Monastery Garden by Kelsby. In the Sonata in A Minor the black har- monies of a Russian atmosphere, bold, massive, finely conceived har- monies alternating with tender, cadenza-like passages, and weird pleading melodies. Soft, lovely cele- stial effects were accomplished by the organist in the Vorspiel by the use of soft strings and flutes, and ef- fective use of the chimes made in a Monastery Garden a charming number.

The two lighter numbers, Because by Kunder and Chanson d'Espoir by Arthur Meale were particularly well received. The concert closed with Sonata in E, a difficult number which exhibited the finger agility and wrist dexterity of the perform- er. As an encore Mr. Webb played Andantino by Lemaire.

FAIR AND WARMER WEATHER PROMISED

Fair and warmer weather will pre- vail here Saturday night and Sun- day, according to predictions of the weatherman for the next 24 hours.

Rising tempera- tures are predict- ed throughout the middle-west Sun- day. Light snow and rain was re- ported here late Friday night.

Showers are pre- dicted for the up- per and lower lake regions, Saturday night, but fair weather will prevail over Sunday.

Winds in the upper regions are in the northwest and in the lower re- gions they are shifting between the southwest and northwest.

The mercury registered 34 degrees above zero at 8 o'clock Saturday morning and 46 degrees above zero at 12 o'clock noon.

DEATHS

RALPH L. SCHWANDT
Ralph L. Schwandt, 22, son of G. C. Schwandt, 134 Grand-ave, Oshkosh, died at his home Saturday morning. He was the grandson of Mrs. A. Schwandt of this city.

Survivors, besides his parents and grandmother, are three brothers, Herbert, Arthur and Robert, all of Oshkosh. Funeral services will be held at 9 o'clock Monday morning at St. Mary church, Oshkosh, with the Rev. William Reul in charge. The body will be brought to Appleton and burial will be in Riverside cem- etery.

Three marriage licenses were is- sued Saturday by John E. Hantschel, county clerk. They were given to the following couples: Joseph Tau- bel, route 1, New London and Jo- sephine Carpenter, route 1, Navarino; Claude Jones and Ardyss Austin, route 4, Appleton; Philip Peroch and Violet Schlegel, route 2, West De- Pere.

BAND CONCERT AT CLOSING RALLY OF COUNTY CAMPAIGN

Chase Osborne, Former Governor of Michigan,
Closes G. O. P. Effort

Arrangements are completed for the address to be given at Law- rence Memorial chapel at 8 o'clock Monday evening by Chase Osborne, former governor of Michigan, who will close the campaign in Outa- gamie county in behalf of Herbert C. Hoover, Republican candidate for president.

Mr. Osborne is coming to Apple- ton under the auspices of the Outa- gamie County Republican club headed by W. H. Zuehlke and the Outagamie County Republican Presi- dent committee headed by A. H. Krugmeier. The 120th Field Artil- lery band will furnish music at the meeting.

Starting his career in Wisconsin as a newspaper man Mr. Osborne has worked as a newsboy, typesetter, reporter, bell boy, mill hand, coal wagon driver, editor, mine owner and finally governor. He purchased the newspaper at Florence, Wis., for $30 in cash and the balance in notes. From Florence he went to Sault Ste. Marie where he became part owner of a weekly and it was there that he first became connect- ed with public life. In 1911 he was elected governor of Michigan and served until 1913. Several times he was mentioned as a possible Re- publican presidential nominee. In 1918 he sought the Repul' can nom- ination to the United States senate but was defeated by Thomas H. Newberry.

More than 60 people attended a Republican political rally in the town hall in the town of Center Friday night. Fred Hertzke and F. P. Wheeler were the speakers. The meeting was sponsored by Mr. Zuehlke's organization.

A. K. ELLIS HOME DAMAGED BY FIRE

Fireman's Leg Crushed Against Hydrant When Truck Backs Up

Several hundred dollars damage was caused by a fire in the basement of the home of A. K. Ellis, 205 W. Prospect-ave, about 7:30 Friday eve- ning. The blaze started in a store room from spontaneous combustion.

The fire was discovered by W. B. Montgomery, 213 W. Prospect-ave, who saw smoke coming from the basement and notified the depart- ment. There was no one at home at the residence when the fire started and Chief G. E. McGillan said when the department arrived the ceiling in the basement had already started burning and that if the fire had had three or four minutes more start it probably would have destroyed the house.

Smoke, which filled the house, caused considerable damage to fix- tures and decorations, according to the chief, who was unable to esti- mate the amount of this loss.

Ed Kline, a fireman, suffered a crushed leg when he was pinned be- tween the new Seagrave fire truck and a fire hydrant. The driver, Chris Daitgen, was attempting to back the truck into a driveway from the narrow street but a car parked at the curb interfered with his ef- forts. The turn was a bit short and the back end of the truck crushed Kline's leg against the hydrant, which is located near the driveway. Kline was taken to his home where an examination showed no bones were broken. He will be unable to work for a week or two.

After hearing reports and discus- sing them and several other projects which have been under consideration, the committee decided to go on re- cord as favoring the intercepting san- itary sewer and work for its comple- tion. The sewer will extend along the river from S. Mason-st. to a point below the water department intakes, according to plans.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. William Kelley of Escanaba, Mich., are spending several days here visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Davis will spend the weekend at the B. A. Ben- son home at Wausu.

Mrs. Paul Sell has returned from Baltimore, Md., where she visited her daughter, Mrs. William Fentner.

Mr. and Mrs. George K. Fischer of Minneapolis will spend the week visit- ing relatives in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. White and son, Kenneth, spent Saturday in Milwa- ukee.

Classification of freight articles will be studied, ac- cording to Roy G. Wort, traffic man- ager of the chamber, and leader of the class. About 50 persons have been attending the sessions.

C. OF C. WELFARE GROUP MAY HELP TO PICK SCHOOL SITE

Committee May Assist Officials When Problem Is Giving Definite Attention

Reports from sub-committees were heard by the community welfare com- mittee of the chamber of commerce Friday afternoon at a meeting in chamber offices. George F. Werner reported on possibility of committee members cooperating with school of- ficials on a new high school site; T. E. Orblson on a conference with Mayor A. C. Rule regarding garbage disposal and C. K. Boyer on the need for a community chest.

Mr. Werner stated that he had con- ferred with B. J. Rohan, city superin- tendent of schools, H. E. Helble prin- cipal of Appleton high school and W. H. Kroiss chairman of the school board and all were pleased that the chamber interested in their problems. Nothing definite has been undertak- en on the new school problem, how- ever, and as soon as action is con- templated the committee's assistance will be asked.

The question of a community chest was taken up with the Civic Council, C. E. Boyer reported, but that or- ganization was not in favor of car- rying on the program. Reaction at the meeting was that Appleton wo- men's club would not support the program if its income was to be de- creased; that the plan was not to be carried with favor generally; that a chest should be devoted only to charita- ble needs; it would prevent other drives of emergency nature; it would re- duce the financial burden for certain organizations and lessen need for personal work; that the Civic Coun- cil would carry investigation further but it does not care to handle the problem as its own.

The report of T. E. Orblson was on his conference with Mayor Rule in which the mayor ask the garbage disposal question be dropped until several more important projects are settled.

After hearing reports and discus- sing them and several other projects which have been under consideration, the committee decided to go on re- cord as favoring the intercepting san- itary sewer and work for its comple- tion. The sewer will extend along the river from S. Mason-st. to a point below the water department intakes, according to plans.

STOCK MARKET ON IRREGULAR BASIS

Pre-election Profit-taking Leaves Soft Spots After Strong Start

New York (AP)—Heavy pre-election profit-taking sales turned the course of stock prices irregular Saturday after an opening interval of strength. Trading was relatively quiet, indicat- ing the temporary withdrawal of many large traders from the market. Several soft spots cropped out throughout the list, but there was no evidence of any concerted "bear" selling.

Leading commission houses em- phasized caution in view of the re- cord breaking loan totals.

Public utility shares attracted a large following in Saturday's market. American Power and Light ran up more than 3 points and gains of a point or more were recorded by Commonwealth Power, American Water Works, Electric Power and Light and Southern California Edison.

Radio lost an early lead of 2 points and a Bernet Leather converted an ear- ly advance of 3 points into a loss of similar extent. Montgomery Ward sold off 5 points, Abitibi Power Pre- ferred and Goodyear each sagged.

Ward Baking preferred dipped 2 points to a new low at $14. Such recent favorites as U. S. Steel Com- mon, Hudson Motors, American Tele- phone and Union Pacific also dropped a point or more.

Buffalo and Susquehanna added nearly 5 points to its 4 point gain of Friday by touching a new top at 54 1/2. Tinkin Roller Bearing sold 4 1/2 points above Friday's final quotat- ion and Devoe and Reynolds 3 1/2.

The closing was irregular. Total sale approximated 1,500,000 shares. Heavy buying of the oil shares featured the opening. Sinclair open- ed with a block of 11,000 shares at 42 1/2, up 1/2, and Pan-American B. quickly ran up 1 1/2 points. Initial gains of a point or so were recorded by Anaconda, Chrysler and St. Lou- is Southwestern Union Carbide open- ed a point lower.

Trading in Saturday's market was of a rather selective character with the J. I. motor, merchandising and amusement shares attracting the largest following. Warner Bros. is- sues each ran up 5 points in the first half hour. Woolworth climbed 4 to a new high record for the year at 207 1/2 and Pan-American "B" extend- ed its gain to more than 2 points.

International Nickel, General Mo- tors, Dupont, Grant Stores and Western Union sold a point or more higher.

Foreign exchanges opened steady with Sterling Cables unchanged at $4.84 27-32.

HERE IS GENERAL INFORMATION ON COMING ELECTION

Expect Vote in Outagamie Co. Will Be Between 15,000 and 20,000

On next Tuesday between 15,000 and 20,000 Outagamie voters will go to the polls in their various towns, cities and villages to help elect a president and vice president, and a full slate of national, state and county officers.

Already the registration list of Appleton and Kaukauna include the names of more than 15,000 voters, more than have ever cast voted in the entire county and county election officials are predicting that Outagamie will cast a high record vote.

With so much interest in the election many voters are seeking information as to when the polls will be open, what method to use in marking their ballots, who may vote and how to split votes.

In Appleton, Kaukauna, Little Chute and Kimberly the polling places will be open from 6 o'clock in the morning until 8 o'clock at night. In the town of Grand Chute the polls will be open from 9 o'clock in the morning until 8 o'clock at night and in the town of Vandenberg the polls will open at 9 o'clock in the morning and remain open until 6 o'clock at night. In all other towns and villages in the county the polls will be open from 9 o'clock in the morning until 5:30 in the afternoon.

SEPARATE BALLOTS

In voting for president citizens will find there is a separate ballot containing the names of the candidates for president and vice president from each party. A single cross is placed after the name of the two men for which a citizen wishes to vote.

A change has been made in Wisconsin this year in the method of voting for president. Previously it was necessary for the voter to vote for presidential electors whose names were listed. This year, a vote for either candidate, automatically casts a vote for each of the presidential electors. When returns are made the electors will follow the usual style in casting their votes for the president.

In voting for state and county officers if a voter wishes to cast a ballot for all the candidates nominated by any one party he places a cross in the circle at the top of the ballot which is beneath the name of the party for whose candidates he wishes to vote.

If a voter does not wish to vote for all the candidates nominated by one party, he shall mark his ballot by making a cross at the right of the name of each candidate for whom he wants to vote.

LIST OF CANDIDATES

Following is a list of the candidates:

ELECTION EXPENSES OF ASHLAND WOMAN TOTAL ONLY 2 CENTS

Madison — (AP) — Mrs. E. Kerswill of Ashland, who probably never came under the finger of shame for having spent too much in the election.

Her political game was for a 2-cent limit.

A candidate for presidential elector on the prohibition ticket, she reported to the secretary of state on Nov. 1, that she had spent two cents on November 3 in her candidacy for the state central committee. This was sound foolishness, but it's just the way it happened. Her report was received Nov. 1, and her notation of the two-cent expenditure was for "Nov. 3." She had also been apparently confused, the secretary of state's office explained, in noting her candidacy for the state central committee instead of the presidential elector race.

At any rate she spent less, or reported less than any one to date.

Her husband, prohibition candidate for congress, probably will rank second in low expenses when the accounts are all in. Edwin Kerswill reported a grand total of 36 cents, including 16 cents "previously reported."

All of Mr. Kerswill's "barrel" went for postage, also the report showing that he will spend it all in one fell swoop in his drive for the election.

"ROTTEN PORK" STORY CALLED LIE BY G. O. P.

Milwaukee — The following statement was made today by Alvin P. Kietzsch, Chairman of the Hoover-Curtis Volunteer club of Wisconsin and president of the Charity Bazaar association which raised more than $2,000,000 in food and money in Wisconsin for German relief:

"My attention has been called to the fact that, in a desperate effort to deceive voters of German blood, a circular is being sent into German homes in Wisconsin by the Blaine Progressive-Democratic group, charging that Herbert Hoover, after the war, conspired with the British to send rotten pork into Germany. I have also seen newspaper reports quoting State Senator John Cashman to the same effect.

"This charge is as unqualifiedly false as the charge of Blaine that Hoover sent the 120 Democratic nomination, a charge I proved false by quoting from Mr. Hoover's own correspondence in which he declined to give his consent to being a Democratic candidate anywhere.

"The truth about this pork story also can be learned from official records, already published in Saturday Evening Post articles last summer by George Barr Baker and in the book, 'American Pork Production in the War' by Frank Surface. Mr. Baker was a commander in the U. S. Navy in the war, used especially as a liaison officer between Hoover and the British during the European relief work immediately following the war. Mr. Surface was economist for the U. S. Food Administration.

"Both of these men published the text of frequent exchanges of correspondence between Herbert Hoover and Sir John Beale, British Food Administrator. These letters total thousands of words and consequently cannot be quoted here, but they show without qualification that instead of conspiring with the British, Hoover was fighting tooth and nail against them in his effort to force England to buy the pork it had agreed to buy, to prevent England from selling its surplus pork to other countries, in violation of the rules of the Allied Food Commission and that England violated these regulations by trading pork to Belgium and Holland for cheese and by sale of pork to various countries.

"If Hoover sent rotten pork to Germany, why has no German ever heard of it before. If he did that, why has virtually every international talker known German praised him so highly and testified without reservation that he was Germany's savior? I refer specifically to such men as Ebert, Germany's first president; Dr. Eckner, builder and pilot of the Graf Zeppelin; Baron Von Huenefeld, the transatlantic flyer; the late Baron Von Maltzen, German Ambassador to this country. I myself on an official inspection trip in Germany saw the relief work done under Hoover's guidance and I know it was done honestly and conscientiously.

"If Hoover sought to betray Germany, why has nearly every leading newspaper in Germany welcomed his coming election as a God-send for Germany and the German people, as certain to bring a new spirit of friendship between America and Germany?

"I believe that Wisconsin citizens of German blood will answer this Blaine-Cashman campaign slander in unmistakable language on election day by uniting in support of Herbert Hoover and thus make it plain that those of German extraction will not countenance the spreading of such absolutely false statements about the man who stood alone as Germany's friend when Germany most needed a friend.

NON-REGISTERED VOTERS MAY VOTE

City Clerk Outlines Procedure Which Must Be Followed by Citizens.

While there are still a good many voters in Appleton who have not yet registered they may vote by following the procedure provided by law according to Carl Becher, city clerk.

In order to vote without having registered the voter must sign an affidavit of non-registration. This is he must swear on oath before a notary public that he has not registered. Then his affidavit must be signed by two free holders or property owners who live in the same ward in which he lives.

The affidavit must be presented at the polls and then the voter will be allowed to cast a ballot.

Mr. Becher pointed out that it would be possible for the non-registered voter to bring the two property owners to the voting booth with him and his affidavit could be filled out there. To eliminate this, however, and to save time and trouble for the election workers, Mr. Becher has a number of affidavits at his office and non-registered voters may call for them there and have them filled out before they go to the polls.

BALLOT OFFICIALS GET INSTRUCTIONS AT MEETING

Appleton election officials received final instructions at a meeting in the city council chambers, Friday evening, from Carl Becher, city clerk and L. Hugo Keller, local attorney.

Approximately 80 persons were present. Mr. Keller explained election laws and rules and Mr. Becher told the clerks about the way in which the polls would be conducted on Tuesday, Nov. 6.

John Hantschel, county clerk gave a short talk on county elections. He pointed out the irregularities at previous elections and the ways in which the officials are trying to avoid difficulties this year.

100 BOYS AT Y. M. C. A. HALLOWEEN PARTY

Approximately 100 boys of the Y. M. C. A. were guests of the boys' department of the association at a Halloween party in the gymnasium, Friday evening, according to C. C. Bailey, boys' work secretary.

Games and stunts featured entertainment. Refreshments were served. Following the program in the gymnasium the boys went for a swim in the association pool.

Again Schneider Refuses to Come Out for Al Smith!

Answering my demand that he tell the voters where he stands, he abuses me, but says it is none of the voter's business whether he is for Al Smith or Herbert Hoover.

He knows that a vote for Hoover and a vote for Schneider would be playing a ghastly joke on Hoover. Nevertheless, he is afraid of the Ku Klux and "Guardian of Liberty" vote if he declares for Smith!

He dodges the question and accuses me of intentionally misinforming the public when I said he ran for office on the Democratic ticket in Outagamie County in 1920. My information was taken from the 1921 Blue Book, an official state publication. On page 234 and on page 284 the Blue Book sets forth that he ran as a Democrat for the Assembly against Mark Catlin, a Republican, who beat him by about 1,000 votes. If I am wrong, the Blue Book is wrong.

Then he tried to dodge the question of whether he is for Smith or Hoover by quoting what I said about Robert M. La Follette in the campaign of 1924. No one ever will quote what he said about anything or anybody. He can't say anything; not even who he supports for President.

In the speech he refers to, I read from a book called "Recollection of a Long Life" prepared, printed and distributed all over the United States in 1915 by Senator Isaac Stephenson, a millionaire lumberman of Marinette, Wisconsin.

I read from page 216 of that book where he is speaking of the first time Mr. La Follette was elected Governor:—

"When (Senator) Stebbins had mapped out the plan he handed La Follette $2,500 in currency which I had given him for that purpose. Apparently overcome at the prospect, and with tears running down his cheeks, he declared that he would be the next Governor of Wisconsin. To defray the expenses of his campaign I gave $2,500 more, six weeks after the Chicago meeting."

I merely read what Isaac Stephenson had published. If it was not the truth, Senator La Follette could have sued the millionaire Stephenson and recovered many thousands of dollars damages for slander and libel, but he never started a suit and, as far as I am aware, never denied the truth of the statements.

Am I to be condemned for reading what was published about, and not denied by a public man? Did I not have a right to show that a politician, who was denouncing the power and corruption of wealth in politics, had not denied that he had taken money from the richest man in the state, and a member of the largest corporation, to use in his own personal campaigns? Had I not the right to show that, after Mr. La Follette became Governor, he supported this same Isaac Stephenson for the United States Senate and that this man was later elected United States Senator by a La Follette controlled legislature?

But Mr. Schneider always has tried to be elected by hitching his little "go-cart" to Robert La Follette's "big band wagon". If it were not for Bob La Follette, Schneider still would be making fools of paper mill workers by leading them in unsuccessful strikes and starving their families, while he drew fat pay as a walking delegate. And he is trying to do the same thing again, and trying to divert attention from his cowardice in refusing to come out for Smith for fear of the Ku Klux Klan.

But he cannot get away from the main thing:—Who is Schneider for? Al Smith or Herbert Hoover? And echo answers:—"Who?"

JOHNSON HAS SUNG GREAT OPERA ROLES

Noted Tenor Was First to Sing "Parsifal" in Italian.

Edward Johnson, leading tenor of the Metropolitan Opera company who will sing next Friday at the opening number of the Community Artist Series, gave the first performance of the great music drama Parsifal in Italian. The prelude to Parsifal, the Vorspiel, was played by Professor William C. Webb, of the Lawrence conservatory, in his first Appleton recital Friday night.

Among other outstanding roles which Mr. Johnson has created are Puccini's Trilico; Montezzi's L'Amore de Tre Re La Nave by d'Annunzio and Montezzi; Phredre by d'Annunzio and Pizetti; Jacqueri by Marinuzzi, and La Sposa di Corinto by Canonici. His latest leading role was the name role in The King's Henchman by Edna St. Vincent Millay and Deems Taylor, presented at the Metropolitan Opera house in 1927.

Mr. Johnson is best known for his leading successes in Romeo and Juliette, Pelleas and Melisande, Carmen, Tosca, Pagliacci, Butterfly, La Boheme, L'Amore de Tre Re, Manon Lescaut, Lohengrin, Boris Godunoff, The Tales of Hoffman, The Girl of the Golden West, Andre Chénier, Aphrodite, Parsifal, Aida, Lohs and Turandot.

Elwin Welch returned Friday evening from St. Paul where he spent several days visiting friends.

Hubert Easbender and daughter, Mabel, left Friday morning for Chicago to visit relatives.

When you think of insurance in terms of the income it will provide for your family, you will carry more insurance. And when you think of it in terms of income, you will demand that it be paid as income, under the terms of a Life Insurance Trust.

Voters! Get straight on the President and Prohibition

In Voting for President You Have Your Choice Between:

GOV. ALFRED E. SMITH

—who has promised to use all the tremendous influence of the office of the President of the United States to obtain a liberalization of the prohibition laws.

DRY HERBERT HOOVER

—an avowed "bone dry," backed by the combined forces of the Anti-Saloon League and organizations of like purposes.

A Vital Issue FOR YOU

Prohibition is an outstanding and vital issue for you as an American. The morals of our youth, the health, decency, and future welfare of our nation are concerned in this problem. A Republican President himself said, "Prohibition is a national scandal." Shall we continue this scandal with another Republican administration or ask for a new deal?

Don't Fall for Deceit on the Prohibition Issue

"Paid" Republican spellbinders and propagandists are trying to deceive you with the statement that "Alfred E. Smith can do nothing about Prohibition if elected." If this is true, why are the professional dries and their organizations making the biggest fight in their history against Gov. Smith?

Here are the FACTS:

The election of Gov. Smith would have a profound influence in abating the evils of prohibition.

His election would "serve notice" that the nation is tired of the dry law farce and its degrading effect on sane laws. What the people want, they get. The election of Gov. Smith would notify Congress that modification is wanted! And if Congress were hostile or slow to act, Gov. Smith would prod it into action. His record with the New York legislature is proof of his ability to get things done!

There are only a few "die in the ditch" dries in Congress today. The great majority of Congressmen and Senators who vote dry, do so because the Anti-Saloon League has them hoodwinked into believing that public sentiment demands it. Show them by the election of Al Smith that public sentiment demands a change, and most of these men in Congress will at once vote for such a change.

Gov. Smith, as president, could have just as much influence in shaping the prohibition policy as he or his opponent could have in shaping any other policy. If the Republicans are right in saying that a president can do nothing about prohibition, then he can't do anything about anything else, and all the promises of the Republican candidates are meaningless.

WOMEN!

You are told to vote for the Republican nominee and save the American Home.

Why does the American home need saving after all these years of Republicanism and "noble experiments"?

There was never any public demand to save our homes before prohibition. If the American home needs saving, are you going to try to save it with the instrument that is destroying it?

Why not turn the job of saving the American home over to a man who has lived in America all his life and knows the needs of the American home? A man who, because he comes from the people, knows the needs of the people and suffers when the people suffer under unjust laws. Our homes need no engineer to save them. They need a human heart!

Alfred E. Smith Proposes

1 To change the Volstead Act by taking out the LIE that a drink containing more than $\frac{1}{2}$ of 1% of alcohol is intoxicating, and putting into the law the TRUTH by prohibiting those drinks only that are in fact intoxicating. This would not conflict with the 18th Amendment and yet would permit GOOD BEER!

2 To change the 18th Amendment and permit the states greater freedom in enacting and enforcing prohibition, the government to continue to cooperate with the states on enforcement.

The first of these proposals — which BRING BACK GOOD BEER — could unquestionably be accomplished soon after Gov. Smith's election. The second could be attained after continued effort under the administration of a fair-minded President.

The Saloon Must Not Return

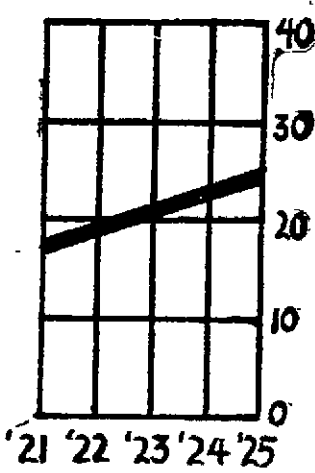

Gov. Smith is against the return of the saloon or any device like it. Nothing in any of his proposals could possibly result in the saloon's return. On the contrary, his program would put the bootlegger, the speakeasy, the "beer flat," blind pig, and racketeer out of business — and surely these are far greater menaces to our nation than the saloon ever was.

Check this Republican Buncombe!

Go to the polls November 6 and register — by your vote for Alfred E. Smith—an overwhelming rebuke to prohibition. Open the eyes of the professional "drys" and paid propagandists to the fact that Americans are sick of a law that is degrading our nation in the sight of the world. Wipe the stigma of crime, law violation, and hypocrisy from our country with your ballots for GOV. SMITH!

Our Rising Death Rate — Why?

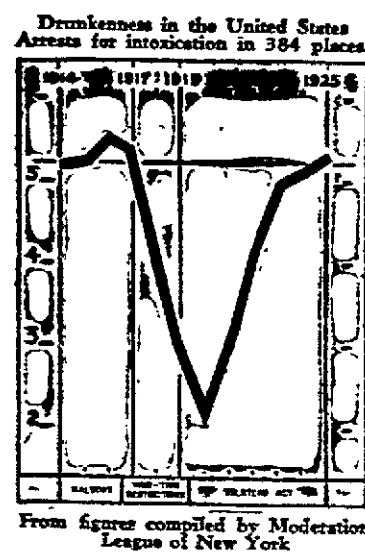

For twenty years or during the registration period from 1900 to 1920, the death rate in this country has continuously declined. Immediately beginning with prohibition the death rate turned upward. That this is due to prohibition is shown by the fact that the upward trend is due chiefly to an increase in the death rate among men, as shown in the accompanying chart.

Death rate of men per 1000. Chart from the records of the Metropolitan Life Ins. Co.

Drunkenness Arrests are Going Up—Why?

Arrests for drunkenness are the best indication of the amount of drinking in the nation. Note the effect of war-time restrictions, when arrests for drunkenness declined tremendously, as compared with the prohibition period when they went up to where they were before prohibition. The war-time restrictions are substantially what Alfred E. Smith proposes for the country.

From an article in the September 19th issue of "The New Republic" we quote the following:

"The presidency of the United States is such a powerful office that a man who is capable of taking full advantage of its possibilities may by skillful leadership with the help of favorable circumstances, accomplish apparent political impossibilities."

"That is why citizens who wish to vindicate anti-Prohibition by voting for Al Smith should not be deterred."

The New Haven (Conn.) Journal Courier of August 29th notes that:

"What we are considering is the ridiculous theory that Governor Smith can do nothing to remedy the frightful social and political condition brought about by the 18th Amendment and its enforcement act. He has already made the Prohibition issue the leading issue of the campaign, and we may be sure that, if Mr. Hoover is elected, his triumph will be hailed as the victory of the dries. If Mr. Smith is elected, his triumph will be recorded as the expression of public opinion and will have its immediate effect upon members of Congress."

If you want liberalization of prohibition, turn down the candidate of the Anti-Saloon League, and Vote for the Outspoken Champion of Modification

A Vote for Herbert Hoover is a Vote for Yourself and Your Job

Let's Keep Republican Prosperity

Why Make a Change?

WITHIN a few months after the enactment of the Underwood Bill, under the Wilson administration, thousands of Wisconsin workers were out of jobs, times were hard and depression had its icy grip on industry and business.

The World War came with its feverish activity and its overwhelming demand for manufactured products. All were given jobs. With the end of the war came general unemployment.

For the past eight years under Republican control of the national government, the United States, of all nations in the world, has been busy and prosperous.

Practically all workers have been employed at the highest wages in history, prosperity and plenty have covered the entire country and American workers are the envy of those of every other nation.

That continues to be the condition of all workers under the present Republican control of the government.

Who can predict what would follow a change in administration? Why make a change when all are prosperous and fully employed?

What more could any other administration do for the workers of America than has been accomplished under Republican rule?

Why not leave well enough alone?

Why not trust the Republican Party — The Party of Prosperity?

Why Take a Chance?

What the Republican Administration Accomplished

It established a Federal Budget System

It created the Foreign Debt Funding Commission to which is being paid the debts owing us by foreign nations, many of which were considered uncollectible.

It created the Emergency Tariff Law and followed this with the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Law, which restored the protection that had been taken away from the farmers' products and manufactured articles by the Democratic Underwood Tariff Law.

It established the Veterans' Bureau and made appropriations for the care of our soldiers which were second only to the amount of money appropriated to pay interest on our public debt.

It created a Dairy Bureau in the United States Department of Agriculture.

It established the U. S. Board of Mediation to adjust labor disputes between employees and employers in the transportation business.

It amended the Workmen's Compensation Act to extend its provisions to all maritime workers and to all employees of the District of Columbia.

It enacted four tax reduction laws which saved American taxpayers nearly $2,000,000,000.

It reduced the national debt over $7,000,000,000

It gave independent citizenship to women

It revised the Federal Highway Act and appropriated $665,000,000 for public highways.

It enacted more legislation in behalf of farmers than had been placed on the statute books altogether for that purpose in the 130 years previous to 1921.

Effects of Republican Administration

Purchases of household furniture have increased 100% since 1921; of electric dishwashers, 170%; of bathtubs, 133%; of electrical goods for various household purposes, 100%.

People do not remodel their homes, install bathtubs, put in electrical appliances and refurnish their homes unless they enjoy prosperity.

The average number of passenger automobiles bought monthly in 1921 was 121,000; in 1927 it was 245,000, or more than 100% increase. In 1928 the average monthly sales have been in excess of 365,000, or an increase of 120,000 over 1927.

The American public is consuming each month 25,000,000 barrels of gasoline now to run its motor vehicles, an increase of more than 200% over 1921 consumption.

The average monthly savings deposits in the savings banks of New York in 1921 were $2,635,000—in 1927 they were $4,020,000, or nearly double.

To demonstrate the prosperity of wage-earners, a strong indication is the issuance of foreign money orders. In 1921 the average monthly issuance was $1,877,000. In 1927 it was $5,906,000—an increase of 314%.

In 1921 an average of 550,000 industrial insurance policies were issued each month in New York State. In 1927 these had increased to 823,700, or a gain of 50%. In 1921 the face value of these policies totaled $104,913,000. In 1927 they totaled $222,278,000, an increase of 112 per cent.

The average collection of premiums on insurance policies of all classes of insurance amounted to $105,556,000. In 1927 it was $200,635,000, or more than 90% increase.

The Republican party has been the real friend of the farmers. The highest protective tariff ever enacted into law has existed under the Fordney-McCumber Act.

The Republican party is pledged to so increase tariff schedules on farm products as to retain the American market exclusively to the American farmer.

It is pledged also to take every remedial measure possible under congressional enactment to place agriculture on a parity with business, industry and labor.

The American farmers' demand for remedial legislation can be trusted to a Republican administration with every certainty of sympathetic and intelligent consideration and action.

Light Airy Sleeping Rooms In Model Home

Bathrooms Are To Be Equipped With Kohler Fixtures In New Colors

Large sleeping rooms with plenty of light and air perhaps is the outstanding feature of the second floor arrangement of the Appleton Post-Crescent's Model Home on Opechee-st. The home was designed first of all for the comfort of its occupants and nowhere is this more pronounced than on the second floor.

Workmen started Thursday to put on the roof and the entire building will be enclosed in the next few days. It is probable the scaffolding used by the workmen for putting up the stone work will be removed and new scaffolding erected for putting on the stucco.

The second floor contains five bedrooms and two bathrooms. The largest sleeping room runs along the entire west side of the house, and is 26 feet long and 14 feet wide, not including an alcove on the south end from which a splendid view of the Fox river and the ravine across the street is afforded.

This room opens directly into a large bathroom, equipped with Kohler fixtures in the rich Autumn brown color.

One of the largest and most pleasant sleeping rooms is built over the garage and is equipped with two closets. The amount of closet space made available by the plan is one of the interesting features of the Model Home arrangement.

Another exceptionally pleasant sleeping room is situated on the south side of the house from which a door opens to a balcony above the bay in which the dining alcove is located.

A bathroom, equipped with Kohler fixtures in Spring green color, is located at the end of the hall near the northwest corner of the house. A hopper which leads to the incinerator in the basement is located in this hall, thereby obviating the necessity for carrying rubbish downstairs to dispose of it.

Two flights of stairs lead to the second floor, one from the front entrance to the house and one from the rear. Another flight of stairs leads to the third floor which will contain a large sleeping room for the maid, a bathroom and a cedar-lined storage room. This room will be without windows and is in fact a glorified cedar chest.

Northern Hemlock is used exclusively for partitions on the second and third floors, assuring stability and strength that cannot be found in any other wood used for that purpose. Every piece of lumber is graded by the Northern Hemlock association, which includes most of the lumber companies of Wisconsin and Northern Michigan, so that the carpenter is assured, when he drives in a nail or a spike, that that particular piece of wood measures up to the highest standards and will give satisfactory service.

Experience has demonstrated that there is nothing better for partitions and framework construction than Northern Hemlock. The lumber is made from well matured trees, is free from resin or pitch which might discolor plaster and it holds tight to nails. The tough wood fibres prevent nails from being drawn by frost and hold the house rigid at all times.

Hemlock is not effected in the least by changes in temperature or by average weather conditions. Hemlock timbers used in houses built a half century or more ago still are in good condition and can be used in new work.

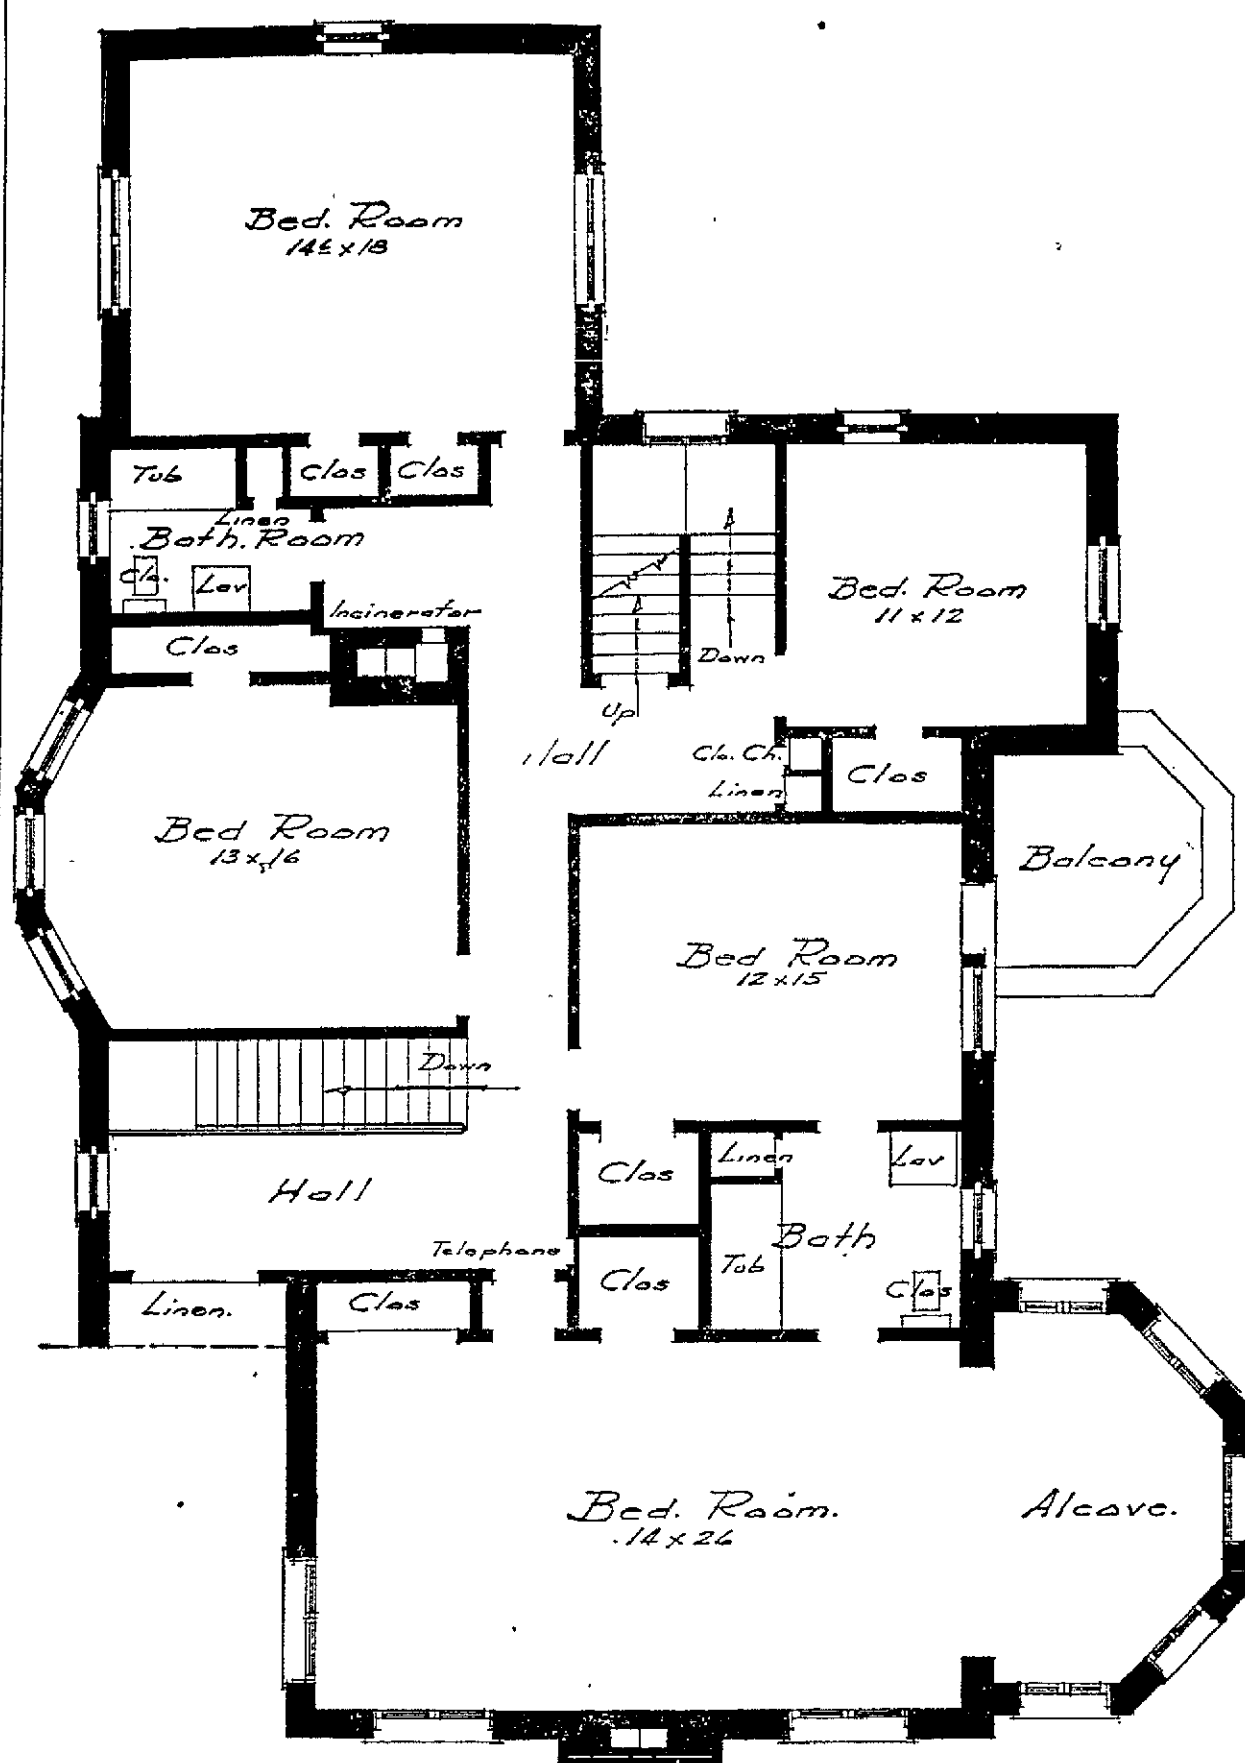

Northern Hemlock furnished by mills in the Northern Hemlock association is cut larger than standard size so that the purchaser actually receives from 4 to 8 per cent more wood than if he bought lumber which conforms only to American Lumber Standards.

Lumber Standards. These standards allow for a slight shrinkage in wood in seasoning and for planing but the Northern Hemlock association cuts its green wood larger than the sizes specified so when the boards are seasoned and planed they are larger than American standards call for.

In all probability the second floor rooms will be covered with colored plaster of various textures. The plastering, however, will not be started for some time.

An abundance of storage space for bed coverings and materials of that nature is assured by the two large linen closets, one in the hall around the front stairway and one in the rear hall. Provision also is made for a small telephone booth on the second floor, close to the sleeping room.

Second Floor Plan Of Post-Crescent Home

Second Floor Plan
Appleton Post-Crescent Model Home
Earl F. Miller Architect

A study of the plans of the second floor of the Post-Crescent's Model Home will reveal the unusual care that has been taken to assure light and airy sleeping quarters. The rooms all are well lighted and well ventilated and they are large and comfortable. The plans also disclose two bathrooms and an abundance of closets.

Helio-Glass In Two Rooms Of Model Home

There will be two health rooms in the Post-Crescent Model Home. Their windows will be constructed of Helio-glass which admits the life-giving rays of the sun. This glass will be placed in the windows of the alcove off the main bedroom and in one of the south bedrooms.

Light as it comes from the sun, is made up of various rays, some of which are visible and some of which are invisible. Helio-glass shows the visible rays which are seen as the seven colors ranging from red to violet. Above the red are invisible heat rays, while below the violet are the invisible ultra-violet rays. A certain portion of the latter is what is called vital or health-stimulating. Experiments over a period of several years have definitely established the fact that the ultra violet rays present in sunlight are of great benefit in the therapeutic treatment of diseases and act also as preventive forces which help to build up the general human system so that it can resist disease which might otherwise gain hold.

This is particularly noticeable in the case of children and of aged people, although in people of all ages exposure to ultra-violet rays is necessary to continued health and well-being. Since these rays are present in sunlight, the question becomes one of how to bring them indoors where modern civilization forces man to spend most of his hours.

Helio-glass, a product of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., admits the majority of the vital ultra-violet rays. In the case of treatment of rickets or tuberculosis of the bones by exposure to sunlight, it quite often happens that direct exposure without shelter presents many difficulties. During inclement weather such practice must often be postponed or interrupted to the annoyance of the patient and often results in lengthening unduly the convalescent period. In schools, children show marked increase in weight, height and physical and mental activity when they are constantly exposed to the ultra violet rays present in sunlight.

Because Helio-glass admits a high percentage of the energy of the curative ultra-violet rays, and at the same time provides shelter against weather as would ordinary window glass, it is possible to subject patients to contact with these healing rays for longer periods at a time without exhausting the patient's strength.

No Radiators In Sight In Model Home

The Herman Nelson invisible radiators that will be found in the bathrooms, vestibule and dining alcove of The Post-Crescent Model Home will never interfere with the interior decoration scheme.

Instead of the bulky, old-fashioned heater, which wars with color schemes and furnishings, the new invisible radiator proves its presence only by a grille in the wall through which the heat is transmitted. Inside that wall, encased in a heavy steel case, the Herman Nelson unobtrusively heats the room. The heat is regulated by an aluminum damper connected to the heat outlet grille. By opening or closing the damper, the knob regulates the heat output.

The radiator is a single unit, consisting of a cast metal core acting as a steam container and many aluminum plates mounted on the core and acting as a heating surface.

The thin and highly conductive plates make a heater one-sixteenth as heavy and one-eighth as big as the ordinary radiator, maintain the same heating capacity.

Its aluminum and aluminum alloy metal make it practically indestructible. Its smooth, straight air passages which afford little opportunity for the collection of dirt, make it sanitary. It is self-cleaning because the air circulates through the passages at a high velocity.

Once installed, it never again needs the slightest attention. It is invisible, silent, leak-proof, rust-proof, indestructible, and combines for the first time all the benefits of radiator heat with freedom from the disadvantages.

How to Reach the Post-Crescent Home

The Post-Crescent's Model Home is located on E. Opechee-st. Autoists can reach the property by turning to the right off E. Pacific-st. at the point where Highway 41 turns to the left. The lot is a block south of the corner of E. Pacific and N. Leminwah-sts. or follow street car line to entrance of Riverside Cemetery, turning right on Owassa-st. The rear entrance to lot is one block south on Owassa-st.

Celotex Most Modern Method of Protection From Heat and Cold

While many important strides have been made in manufacture and the arts in the last three centuries, in that period, until very recently, there has been little change in the methods of building construction. The homes erected have been of the same general type of those our ancestors have been erecting since the Middle Ages—four walls, a roof, doors and windows. The same materials have been used, wood, brick, stone, concrete, with few variations. Thatched roofs, crudely planned to help keep out the cold, have to be replaced by shingles of various types, but in general, the type of construction has been much the same.

Kohler Tub Is Near Approach To Nature's Own

The baby used to get his bath in a washbowl and the family used to take its weekly bath in a circular tub full of hand-toted water that had been warmed on the kitchen stove.

No such primitive practice will prevail in The Post-Crescent Model Home on Opechee-st. The three bathrooms in the home will be the very latest thing in convenience and beauty. One will be furnished with spring green Kohler colored fixtures; one with autumn brown Kohler fixtures and the third is in white. Nature's bathtub with a polychrome ceiling of changing blues, and whites and sunset colors, walls of horizon trees, and a sandy floor is probably the most beautiful. But nature's bathtub is not accessible on a December morning fifteen minutes before you're due at work. Next best is a Kohler bathtub.

Among the Egyptians, the bath was practiced as a religious rite; in general, the opinion of antiquity was that purification of the body was purification of the soul. Man, it was thought, ought to present himself pure in body and soul, when he was engaged in the service of his God, when he expected to meet Him or when he was praying not to meet Him. Moses may have had in view the prevention or cure of skin diseases, so prevalent in the East when he made the bath a frequent religious ordinance. The Moslem law prescribes expressly, in some cases, the use of running water. In Palestine, wealthier Jews had perfected a new building material that made possible a big step forward in building construction. From the fibers of sugar cane they produced a new material, Celotex, which in addition to structural strength, had the qualities of resisting the passage of heat, cold, noise and moisture. This material made into big, broad boards at ½ inch and one inch thickness, four feet wide and from eight to twelve feet long, found such a welcome waiting for it in the building field that its sales doubled and redoubled each year until now about 300,000,000 feet are sold each year. Already more than 200,000 American homes have been improved by its use and it is being exported to practically every country in the world.

Celotex insulation makes a house not only stronger and quieter, but it also makes it cooler in summer, warmer in winter and far less costly to heat. Where houses are properly insulated with Celotex, a smaller and less expensive heating unit is required and the annual fuel bills are cut from 25 to 35 per cent so that the insulation pays for itself in these savings, giving additional comfort at no cost.

In the model home the Post-Crescent is building at 1236 E. Opechee-st. this Celotex insulation is one of the features ensuring comfort and economy to the occupants.

MR. HOOVER'S LEADERSHIP

At least three of Mr. Hoover's campaign speeches take rank as notable state utterances, the Newark address on labor and industrial economy; that at New York on the government in commercial enterprise and his St. Louis treatment of interior waterway development and the farm problem. We have previously discussed the first two. Combined, these three speeches present a program of governmental policy that looks generations in advance, that discloses a profound interpretation of our institutions reaching to the very bedrock of American life. And with it vision that would build this nation to heights of superiority and individual well-being as yet conceived by few. He grasps the status of the new era brought on by the World war and the marvelous strides of recent times, mighty in their potentialities but as yet largely disorganized, giving rise to great social, political and economic problems, controversy, uncertainty, ill-digested proposals and a general groping after leadership.

Mr. Hoover sees what is at stake, he sees the forces at work that are striving for an outlet and that require safe and constructive guidance. He understands the organism of the modern world in all its intricacies and complexities. It goes far beyond the politician's viewpoint on every great question of government and society. He gets to the bottom of things. His idealism is that of a Wilson, and back of it extraordinary organizing genius and a record of practical achievement both at home and abroad, in everything he has undertaken, that makes him a national and international figure. All this imparts assurance in his ability to do things as well as to think and reason them out.

Mr. Hoover realizes that the tasks of government at this time are not easy. Many of them are extremely difficult and complicated. He does not dismiss or "solve" them with the simplicity of the politician. He offers no specific cure-alls for a multitude of ailments and problems that are as varied and confusing as the ills of the human body, but he does address himself to them with the authority of a diagnostician, who knows his business, can go to their work and sift order out of chaos. He never stated a more pertinent fact than when he declared at St. Louis that only the inexperienced can be positive in the solution of great problems. Disregard of the truth is responsible for a multitude of politicians going up and down the land solving this and solving that with empty phrases, proposing remedies for something they know nothing about, making promises they cannot fulfill and turning up confusion and discord.

Mr. Hoover professes to be no super-man who of his own power will save the country from its follies, exploiters, destructionists and doctrinaires, and in that he represents a complete departure from time-honored political methods. He views and dissects the picture with an engineer's eye and goes at a problem with a builder's mind. His rare ability that, has so often amazed the world with actual performance is apparent in everything he says. Never once does he harangue or scold; always he is rational, constructive, efficient.

In his vast waterway proposal he visualizes new agencies that will not only bring inadequate transportation facilities up to the nation's requirements, but will rehabilitate the entire mid-continent industrially and economically and impregnate it with new virility and life. He would keep the channels of commerce and distribution up to its tremendous development, growth and production, both actual and potential. He sees that immediate steps for extensive water outlet to the Atlantic and the gulf are essential to mid-continent progress, and he sees what a lot of archaic and blind railway executives cannot discern, but this expansion of waterways will not injure the railroads but will furnish them with greater tonnage than they have ever had by the heavy stimulation of industry and agriculture that will follow.

Similarly, with the farm problem Mr. Hoover's St. Louis speech reveals the same analysis and understanding. He submits a program such as any great business or organizing genius will instantly see must lead to its ultimate and permanent solution. It is not a Postum formula, it is a great commercial enterprise, definite in outline, that offers the only promise of raising agriculture to the secure status of the manufacturing industry.

No one can doubt for a moment that under this man's direction his proposed government cooperation will accomplish results the country is anxious to see brought about. It is worth a dozen political devices like the McNary-Haugen scheme. It is the intelligence and skill of the master business builder applied to farming. Moreover, it will leave the farmer in complete possession and control of his business and save it from the blight and tyranny of government bureaucracy. It preserves freedom to agriculture, and a maximum freedom to the people along with all economic life from bureaucratic domination is vital to the fullest expression of individual rights and opportunity—the one and only thing that distinguishes the American from the European system.

Finally, Mr. Hoover sees and invites an industrial age that would raise labor to new planes of acquisition, compose differences and stabilize and equalize the prosperity of employer and employee. His whole conception of national progress rests on economic rather than political action, plus government cooperation. Rightly directed there are neither political nor reactionary forces that could defeat his program, once it is set in motion. And we think the country is ripe for his advanced and constructive ideas, which are in no sense theories, but rest on modern applied principles with which Mr. Hoover is fairly familiar in practice. A man who can go through a campaign as he has done, hold his poise and keep his proposals clearly before the country without flinching is one to take account of.

This or any other country produces men of Mr. Hoover's capacity for distinguished public service only periodically.

PAR EXAMPLE

Cong. Beck, who made a losing race for governor in the Republican primary, announces he will vote for the Democrat nominee. Press dispatches say he declared there was no alternative, on the ground that Mr. Kohler has been "silent on the important matters in the state."

If Mr. Beck can name one matter of state concern to the people of Wisconsin that Mr. Kohler has not discussed we should like to have him specify it. Not only has Mr. Kohler discussed at length and over and over again every possible question of state policy and administration, but he has treated them all with a high degree of intelligence, and with more clarity and force than they have been handled by a candidate for governor in many years. Furthermore, no more progressive doctrines and program have been advanced in this state since the time of the late Robert M. La Follette.

Mr. Beck's empty comment is that of the practiced politician accustomed to giving no sound or valid reason for any course of action, and of making statements of the widest variance from the facts and calmly expecting the people to accept them. It illustrates the mental processes of the politician of the type Wisconsin has been afflicted with during the last decade. It accentuates, too, the fortunate escape of the state from having Mr. Beck as its governor.

INSOLENCE

Senator Norris, although an ardent dry himself and still clinging to his dry principles, has, in weighing the different issues in this campaign, announced his support of Gov. Smith for the presidency. Before the delivery of his speech supporting Gov. Smith the Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league for Nebraska issued this warning to him:

The Anti-Saloon league has always supported Norris in the past, but if he makes this speech for Smith, the league is through with him. The Anti-Saloon league will oppose Norris in future campaigns if he does this thing.

This is in keeping with the principles of the Anti-Saloon league as they have been promulgated in the past in several other states. It is a vicious idea. It proceeds upon the basis that however intelligent a man may be, however high-minded his purpose, honest his record or courageous his stand, unless he votes as directed by the Anti-Saloon league and eats out of its hand, so to speak, he is doomed to political Hades. Unfortunately too the other side of the picture has been supported by the Anti-Saloon league—that is, however unsatisfactory for office a man may be, however shift or spotted his record, however unfaithful to public trust, he is given the full-fledged and wholehearted support of the Anti-Saloon league so long as he agrees with it on the dry issue and promises to do as directed.

Any organization guided by such an idea is not only blind but dumb. It must, as it has, lose caste swiftly. It becomes an enemy of democratic government. Its autocratic, dictatorial manner is justly resented. It has no proper place in the American political system. Its power has waned. Men no longer tremble before its threats. Rather do they welcome its opposition. The sooner it ceases to control any substantial amount of power in our government the sooner will we come to a rational solution of the difficult and bothersome question of prohibition.

The political tide appears to be running towards Gov. Smith. It is certain that one of the reasons is the work of the Anti-Saloon League in this campaign.

POST-TONIC

The Remedy is Worse Than the Malady

HAROLD THE SEER and Mack o' the Doon were talking Thursday about the landing of the Graf Zeppelin in Germany. Their attention was centered particularly on the reception given the zeppelin by the German people.

"How can a guy like Clarence, go away with that stuff," wondered Harold the Seer, forgetting his own moniker, for a minute—until the door Mack made some remark apropos people what live in glass houses. Then Harold quoted statistics galore about how rich Clarence will be within a year in dollars and publicity.

"I'm here to tell you," exclaimed Harold, who, although the fact may not be known generally, has considerable avocurpos, "that if I had been on that field I'd have sneaked into that Zeppelin, too."

"Huh," snickered Mack, "that blamed blimp would never have left the ground if you had."

—Rudolph of the Bayou.

Judge Theodore Borg opines that a lawyer must have written that first story on Appleton's secession from the state of Wisconsin. Well, if I were a judge, and had to listen to what Whittier so poetically called "weary lawyers with endless tongues," or words to that effect, I think the worst about them, too. Even at that, it isn't so impossible that the judge is right, for there's a lot of mud in that particular Bayou. One person couldn't consume it all.

—Galahad Jiltme.

HOW ABOUT "GAL"?

"Well, there's one comfort," mused the city editor, "whoever wins, it won't be hard to write headlines about him."

THOSE KENOSHA STRIKERS HAD A LOVELY TIME GOING TO JAIL, AND THEY'LL PROBABLY THINK THAT THE NAME WAS WORTH THE GAME WHEN THEY GET OUT AGAIN. RIGHT NOW, THOUGH, I'LL BET THAT THEY'RE WISHING FOR SOME LIBERTY BONDS.

"Nothing," says the Marinette Eagle-Star, "can so quickly transform a scrub cow into a thoroughbred as to have a train hit her."

OR A GOOD AIRPLANE

An American millionaire has just paid $12,000 for a first edition of Shakespeare's works, and the rural editor thinks him plumb foolish. "For the same money," says this same editor, "we could send the millionaire our paper for 3,000 years and would throw in for good measure our marked set of Shakespeare's works and a copy of the Bible with our autograph in it."

Dick (looking up from his newspaper): "I say, Jim, what is the Order of the Bath?"

Jim: "Well, as I have experienced it, it's first the water's too hot; then it's too cold; then you're short a towel; then you step on the soap, and, finally, the telephone bell rings!"

GRACE EXPLAINS "O. D."

Miss Grace Green, a guileless woman, had an active bank account. With a balance which had varied of late. So to calm her fears and ascertain the current net amount.

She obtained a statement from the bank to date. This report showed many figures and was closed with the remark:

"O. D. Twenty-seven dollars and one cent."

Much elated Grace dashed downtown for a grand old shopping junk.

And left checks for all the money she had spent.

She was hailed before the court upon a charge of False Pretense.

"Over Drunk" as "O. D." left her weak and dumb.

She explained that "On Drunk" seemed to her to make good sense. "Not Guilty—Only Dumb."

And the verdict was "Not Guilty—Only Dumb."

TO EIR IS HUMAN—TO KEEP IT QUIET IS NOT.

Little Boy: "Was the policeman ever a little baby?"

Mother: "Why, yes of course."

"Oh, mummy, I should love to see a baby policeman."

Famous physician (to man plastering defective wall): "The trowel covers up a lot of mistakes."

Workman: "Yus, gosh—'and so do the quide."

THEY HAVEN'T GOT THRU THE SKIN YET

For a year or longer readers have been sending me clippings of a curious item that seems to be going the rounds of the press. This item usually appears in the form of a dispatch from Vienna. Somehow it does seem as tho it should come from Harley street or from somewhere in France. But it is always from Vienna, if one believes all one reads in the clippings. Anyway, the item tells how it is going to be possible, in the near future to feed a man thru his skin. Yes, sir, and ain't it awful Mabel—why, my gracious the skanky people will be rioting to get next place in the beauty parlor chair and the fat ones won't dare to visit the place for a facial, lest the experts rub in a little steak and potato on the sly. It seems, in the Vienna dispatch, that an unidentified "Austrian doctor" has succeeded in forcing enough nourishment thru the skin of a patient to maintain strength and body heat.

What a demoralizing effect this news will have on the business of the big muscle boys, the mail order artists who sell "courses" to the personal Yankee sucker.

The comical item even contains a special bait, to prepare the suckers for the promotion campaign that is to follow in due course. This is a revelation that the "process" discovered by the nameless Austrian savant, involves a kind of massage with a mysterious mixture of fat, proteid, sugar and the necessary vitamins. There, that will make 'em all sit up and watch for the introduction of the great nostrum. It may even intrude a few more of less reputable medical gentlemen, for be it so rudely said, many a doctor's name is cheaply bought.

Of course my base suspicions may be unwarranted. The item about "forcing nourishment" thru the skin may be just some correspondent's little joke. But if it isn't advance agent's propaganda, why oh, why does it appear a thousand times in the year, and always in the form of a regular news dispatch?

Another little joke that my anonymous correspondents enjoy playing on me is this: Every day or two they send me a clipping, marked with an arrow pointing to the disturbing assertion of an esteemed colleague that cases of poisoning by aniline or benzol, from the wearing of shoes immediately after dyeing the leather with a dye containing aniline or benzol derivative, "prove that these poisons are absorbed thru the unbroken skin." My correspondents, first taking good pains to remain hidden, ask me some laconic question about the "clash of opinions."

Shucks, suppose one spilled a bottle of chloroform on one's necktie and presently became unconscious. Would it prove that the chloroform was absorbed thru the skin of the chest? Sure it would, in my illustrious colleague's opinion. But not in my opinion. I'd like to go to the mat with my colleague about this, on these terms: I'll let him dye my boots with the poisonous dye, provided I may have control of the air I breathe; on the other hand, he must let me daub the same dye upon a square foot of wood or metal surface and keep this daubed surface as near his face as his knees are, for 24 hours.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Copper Kettle

Kindly tell me if the action of salt water on a copper kettle which gives the brine a greenish color and the potteries a brownish green color, is harmful to health. I mean, of course, the health of one who eats the pickle. (Mrs. A. H.)

Answer—If the pickles are satisfactory in taste there is not enough copper to worry about.

Colored Blood

Is there any way to tell whether a person has colored blood in his veins? Would a blood test tell anything? (E. J. G.)

Answer—You mean negro blood, I suppose. There is no test to determine whether a person has any alien blood in his veins or any trace of alien ancestry. Why bother about such a fancy anyway? If the individual himself is acceptable for what he purports to be, what difference if he has a trace of this or that alien blood or ancestry? If you are troubled by yarns of "throw-backs," I can assure you that such yarns are purely fictitious or imaginary and no such reversion to type ever occurs. All the children of a person of mixed blood will have less of the alien blood than the parent, provided the other parent does not contribute more of the alien blood.

Oh, Peg, Please Write

Please send me the address of Mrs. P. E. G. I have the same trouble and I want to ask her how she was cured of this trouble (Mrs. H. H.)

Answer—Even if I knew Peg's address or whatever was her trouble, I couldn't comply. All communications are confidential, so far as I am concerned.

Golter

Kindly send me complete details about your method of using iodine for golter. (M. E. F.)

Answer—My advice is that anyone with a golter should consult his own physician. Never should a golter patient use iodine, unless under the direction of his own physician.

BARBS

About thirty people died of poison liquor in New York. Chemists examining the stuff they drank found it contained such things as salicid, pyridine, nitrobenzene, aniline and phenol. The only thing a drink lacks these days is a couple of rusty tacks.

Electricity is now offered as a cure for black eyes. Great help to the little fellows who go home late to the "little woman" and run into a door or something in the dark.

Nicaragua's president has taken up golf. Some people don't know when they have enough punishment.

Dry officials might say that straw votes which show Al Smith ahead of Hoover really are the votes of the "little woman" and the "little man" who were surprised at Smith's power speech because she thought he was wet.

See-Sawing On Broadway

By Gilbert Swan

New York—It pays very well to be the hind legs of a horse—or a mule for that matter.

In a world where over-supply in almost all professions is the order of the day, it's really surprising how few good "hind legs" are in the market. Broadway generally has a standing demand for such talent and yet has on its books but a very few names.

It takes more than passing talent to be the "hind legs" of a horse. Some of the biggest laughs of many a show have been provided by a man whose face has never been seen by thousands and thousands of audiences. But his legs and feet are extremely familiar.

George Ali is, perhaps, Broadway's outstanding "hind legs." But Ali can also be a musical comedy dog, if called upon.

Last season a woman appeared in the "hind legs" role, but no one knew it until the theatrical season had ended. It was in "Fanny Ann." Seymour Felix, the dance director, who cast her for the role, says she was a middle-aged woman, whose name did not so much as appear on the program, and who remains anonymous to this day. For all I know she may be hidden under the eccentric covering of a musical comedy show at this minute in some Broadway play.

"Yet," reports Seymour, "she was one of the most conscientious members of the cast. Always in make-up, though she didn't need it, and always ahead of time. Perhaps it was her one stage chance."

When Arch Selwyn went to London to look over his forthcoming show, "This Year of Grace," he found that one of the big laughs of the performance was provided by such a trick horse. It was one of the best numbers of its kind he had ever seen.

Going back stage between acts to meet the performers who played the horse, he found the front legs to be a man of 72 and the hind legs was played by his son, a man of 50. They had been doing this sort of work for many a year.

But they wouldn't come to America, in spite of the offers and appeals of the manager. They were too old to tear up roots at home and come to a new land, they said.

The story goes that Selwyn became greatly annoyed at their stubborn attitude, and after pleading with them for a time began to swear a bit violently.

Whereupon the old man walked over and tapped Selwyn on the shoulder, and motioning to his 50-year-old son, said: "Look here, you can't use that sort of language in front of the boy."

Manhattan's annual musical novelty will this year be a conductorless symphony orchestra.

Last year it was the mechanistic symphony with steam whistles, auto horns, 20 xylophones, fire crackers and anvils, to say nothing of minor noise creators.

This season the American Symphony Ensemble has turned out the first symphony orchestra to play without a conductor. It has been tried successfully, I am told, in some European cities. The idea is, so I am informed, to let the individual musicians figure out their own interpretations of a composition. The program is arranged by the musicians' name a committee to decide on the interpretation. Intense rehearsal is made necessary since there is no baton to guide them.

Musicians from all over the country are coming here to watch the experiment, I am told.

FARMER EXPLAINS MILK DISTRIBUTION

Brooklyn Dairyman Outlines System Employed by Chicago Milk Dealers

BY W. F. WINSEY

Black Creek—At a meeting of the dairymen of this vicinity in the town hall Thursday evening, R. P. Ames, a dairyman of Brooklyn, Wis., a member of the board of directors of the Pure Milk association of Chicago, and an organizer of dairymen of Wisconsin, described the milk situation in Chicago, the Pure Milk association, the plans of organizing pure milk locals in counties, and the relation of these locals to the board of directors of the Pure Milk association in Chicago.

Two big milk dealers handle most of the milk in Chicago, he explained. Seventy per cent of the Chicago supply comes from Wisconsin. In 1912 dealers and producers shared equally in the price Chicago consumers paid for milk when the consumers paid 8 cents a quart. In 1917, farmers got 5 cents a quart and the dealer 6 cents. In 1918 to 1920 farmers got 7 cents and dealers 8 cents a quart. In 1922 farmers got 4 cents and dealers 8 cents. In 1925 farmers and dealers got 8½ cents a quart. Last year and so far this year, the average price has been about 5 cents with the retail price 14 cents a quart, leaving the dealer 9 cents a quart. In the division of price, consumers pay for milk, producers have no voice. By squeezing an additional 10 cents for a hundred pounds of milk out of the producers, one of the two big dealers can add $100,000.00 yearly to his profits he pointed out.

While all milk producers are in favor of complying with the sanitary milk requirement of the Chicago board of health and realize that these requirements are a necessary health measure and will soon be enforced in cheese factories, butter factories and at all sources of dairy production, they have been put to a big expense in the building of milk houses and in making other improvements and they have not been paid any part of the cost of these improvements in an increase in the price of milk. This and an unequal division of the price the Chicago consumers pay for milk are two of the reasons for producers organizing the Pure Milk association, it was said.

The Pure Milk association has already enrolled 7,200 milk producers who are contributing to the Chicago milk supply. It is the intention of the association to enroll all the milk producers of the Chicago district.

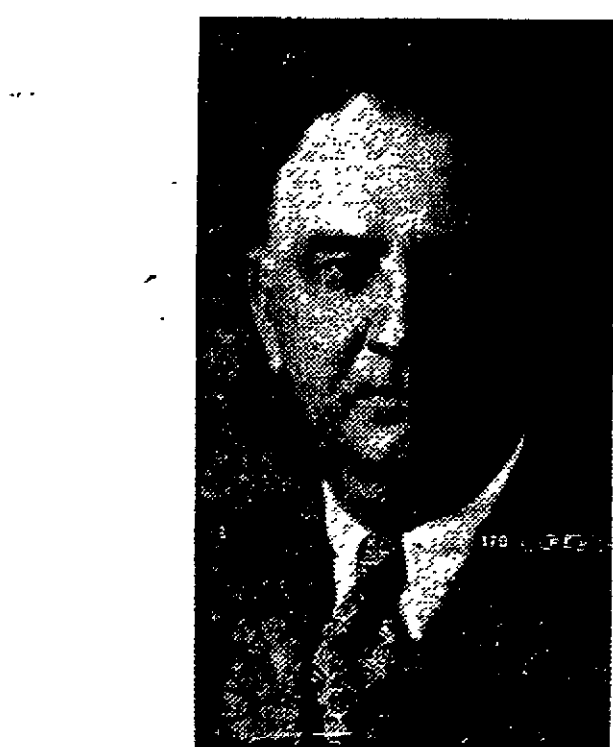

In organization work, the county is made the unit. Various locals are formed in a county, officers are elected and meetings are held. At a county meeting of delegates of locals, a member of the central board of the Pure Milk association is elected to meet with the board in Chicago. The initiation fees are $5 and one cent on each hundred pounds of milk that a member produces is assessed to cover the running expenses of the association.

"The Pure Milk association acts only as the agent of milk producers in Chicago," said Mr. Ames.

THREE LAKES COED IS ORMSBY HALL PRESIDENT
Winifred Sullivan, Three Lakes, was elected president of Ormsby hall, freshman dormitory for girls at Lawrence college, defeating Welta Brown. The election was made necessary due to the fact that the officer elected earlier in the year held too many points under the new point system in force at the college. The system governs the activities of women in the college of liberal arts, allowing them each 20 activity points.

Mrs. Miln Wrtes New China Tale

THE FLUTES OF SHANGHAI, by Louise Jordan Miln. Frederick A. Stokes Company.

Mrs. Miln has added another to her long list of charming Chinese stories. The author of "In a Shantung Garden" and "Mr. Wu" has again pictured the exotic beauty of old China, with its peach blossoms, its quaintly garbed men and women, its lovely native gardens. Shanghai, city of mystery and danger, is shown in time of peace and also in time of fighting during the recent outbreak and bloodshed there.

John Cadell, a wealthy Englishman who has lived all his life in Shanghai, has, because of a great friendship for a fellow Englishman, become involved in a situation which causes scandal in the European circles of Shanghai. Why does he maintain "Peach Flowers," his mysterious Chinese home, and why his remarkable friendship for Hing Mee-Xin, the beautiful little flute-girl?

Mrs. Miln has skillfully unfolded a complicated and gripping plot, delicately suggested the romance of old China, and at the same time dramatically presented interesting phases of the recent tense struggles between the old and the new factions in China.

CONSTRUCT ALCOVE FOR MONTHLY ART EXHIBIT

An exhibit alcove is being modeled in Lawrence college library to better display the monthly art exhibits received from the Chicago Galleries association. The exhibit booth, a sky-light room on the second floor of the building, is being fitted with a high powered theatrical lighting system which will show the works of art to their best advantage.

The art exhibits will consist of monthly consignments of pictures of the best artists affiliated with the Chicago Galleries association. In addition to these will be collections of etchings, crayon sketches, water colors, and miscellaneous types of artistry.

The exhibit now on display in Professor O. P. Fairfield's room in the same building is one of the Chicago Galleries collections. It will be on exhibit until Nov. 13.

HUNGER FIGHTERS, by Paul de Kruif. Harcourt, Brace and Company.

The story of the men who first discovered some of our most indispensable food-stuffs is lost in the remote mists of the pre-historic past. wheat, one of the greatest boons that humanity enjoys, was probably a wild plant in southwest Asia. Some one thousands of years ago discovered its usefulness, adopted it for food, and had the vision and the initiative to save its grain for future supply and planting. Paul de Kruif, in his new book "Hunger Fighters," says that "nobody remembers the name of the first Turk or Jew or Tartar who tamed this wild wheat and thereby gave man his 'staff of life.'" Another of the most important foodstuffs is maize, or Indian corn. No one knows, or can ever know, says de Kruif, "how the first aboriginal red man—or woman—stumbled on to the first green accidental tree of maize" and finding it good gathered it and saved the seed and began its cultivation near the dwelling places of man.

It is a far cry from the earliest wheat, with its feeble growth and scanty yield, to the luxuriant mid-western fields of light gold, rust-resistant, bearded Kibanka, or thousands of acres of the hard red Khar-kov that survives the cold winters, or great expanses of the sturdy Canadian Marquis wheat that resists the early frosts. Some of the men recovered with this progress are portrayed by de Kruif in his book. As the population has increased and greater demands have been made upon the soil, these resourceful men have sought diligently and with success to increase the yield of wheat and other grains.

Carleton, an American, lived to see twenty million acres in this country recovered with the hard Khar-kov wheat, which he later with great labor and sacrifice, discovered and introduced into this land. Carleton died in a pest hole in South America where he had gone as a "hunger-fighter" to discover new and better plants for America. It is men like Carleton that are the "hunger-fighters" whose fascinating warfare for mankind is so interestingly described by de Kruif in his latest work.

Dr. de Kruif, whose "Microbe Hunters" excited so much interest and still is being widely read, was at one time connected with the Rockefeller Institute, and was also a student of Jacques Loeb. In "Microbe Hunters" he dramatized man's fight against disease. Selecting twelve famous scientists like Pasteur, Koch, and so on, he took his readers into the laboratories of these great investigators, caused him to share with them their patient re-buffs, disappointments, false hopes and final triumphant discovery of world-revolutionizing facts regarding disease and remedies for them.

In "Hunger Fighters" the same methods are used. Something like a dozen men who have contributed in some unusual and monumental way to satisfying of man's ever gnawing hunger are selected by de Kruif for his dramatic stories. He does not linger long over the dry, uninteresting

Get Tang Of Salt Air In New Story

SILAS BRADFORD'S BOY, by Joseph C. Lincoln. D. Appleton and Company.

Joseph C. Lincoln has been writing Cape Cod stories a long while (this is his twenty-eighth book of fiction) but his mellow humor, his gentility, his sympathy, his store of quaint and lovable characters, his supply of sparkling scenes and heart-warming situations seems inexhaustible.

"Silas Bradford's Boy" is a good Cape Cod story. It has the tang of the salt air about it. Ebenezer Tadgett and Sheba, his wife, who sees vision; Cousin Hettie; Cap'n Abijah, Banks Bradford's uncle, are welcome additions to Mr. Lincoln's Cape Cod gallery. A villain, a beautiful girl, and a struggling young lawyer who wonders about his father Cap'n Silas Bradford, "who was shot with a pistol in San Francisco," make a triangle that sets the Cape Cod gossips buzzing.

The court scene, in which Silas Bradford's boy opposes the city lawyer in the Tadgett-Truman side-bar lawsuit, is one of the finest Lincoln has ever written.

scientific data connected with their work but presses on immediately into the essentially romantic features of their important, arduous and sometimes dangerous work. And as in his previous book, he dramatizes the men at their investigations. We

HOPE TO MAKE ANNEX SAFER AGAINST FIRE

Madison—(P)—Steps to make the Capitol annex in which are housed the state highway department, traveling library, and other offices, more safe against fire, are being taken by C. B. Ballard, superintendent of public property.

About a hundred new fire extinguishers, of varying sizes have been recommended by a state fire inspector, who looked over the building at the request of the property head. Mr. Ballard has announced that they will be purchased and installed.

follow them as if we were one with them in their wrestlings with some of the most difficult and discouraging problems that man has had to face in his never-ending struggle with hunger. As every one of these "hunger-fighters" is a winner, the reader shares with him the thrill that comes with victory in his particular search or struggle.

"Hunger Fighters" will be especially interesting to Wisconsin readers for it gives a very considerable amount of space to two great Wisconsin "hunger-fighters." Stephen Moulton Babcock, of the state university, known to fame as "the father of the vitamins," and Harry Steenbock, from a farm in northern Wisconsin, who "cut his scientific eye teeth under the genial eye of the merry Babcock." It was Steenbock, says de Kruif, "who trapped the life-guarding of the sun's rays." The story of how Steenbock refused large sums for his "trick of trapping the sun," how he tried to get the University to patent it, and how finally without condition he assigned to the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation his rights to his own discovery is a most heartening and inspiring story of altruism. The part played by E. B. Hart, brilliant young chemist, who came to Madison help Babcock in his experiments, is also given large space.

De Kruif writes with a magic pen. His "Microbe Hunters" caused a sensation. "Hunger-Fighters" lacks the novelty but contains the essential qualities of success found in its predecessor, and it will be popular.

ELECT HOOVER, MARKHAM PLEADS

Success of St. Lawrence Waterway Project Would Be Boon to State

Kenosha—(P)—William H. Markham, independent candidate for United States senator, Friday night called the election of Herbert Hoover a paramount issue for Wisconsin, as his favor for the St. Lawrence waterway would be a "vital step toward obtaining this great boon to Wisconsin."

Senator Markham pointed to Kenosha, Racine and Milwaukee virtually Atlantic seaports, with the canal connecting them with the ocean. "It is a fair presumption and an established fact that it means that where Kenosha, Racine, Milwaukee, Sheboygan, Manitowoc and Green Bay now stand, within the next years following the completion of the deep waterway, there would be cities approaching a million people each."

"It would mean a saving of ten cents per bushel on every bushel of wheat produced by the farmers of America and Canada."

As the annual production of cheese and butter from Wisconsin cows approach the billion mark, the possible saving of one-half cent per pound in shipment of Wisconsin dairy products means millions of dollars in the pockets of our Wisconsin farmers.

"Adding this relief to the relief afforded by the increased tariff on cheese and butter provided in June, 1927 by President Coolidge, every Wisconsin farmer should begin to receive close to $3 per hundred for his milk and a proportionate price for cream."

COST REDUCED Almost One-Third on Loans $10 to $300

The Household Finance Corporation, by reason of large volume of business, efficient management, and favorable credit facilities, attained after fifty years of operation, is now making a very substantial reduction in the cost of loans up to $300.

You can borrow from us for about one-third less than we formerly charged, and about one-third less than the maximum lawful rate. For example, total cost on $30 for one month is $1.25; for six months, paid in five equal monthly payments, is $3.75. All other amounts up to $300 at same proportionate rate.

If you have a loan elsewhere, let us explain our new reduced rate and tell you how much you will save by borrowing from us. You get the money without delay, return it in small monthly payments, arranged to suit your convenience. Each payment of principal reduces the interest.

No Endorsers. No one need know. Our service is personal and confidential. We do not notify your employer, neither do we make inquiries of your friends, relatives or tradespeople.

Loans made in Appleton, Neenah, Menasha, Kaukauna, Kimberly, Little Chute and other nearby towns.

Both Smith And Hoover
Are Careful About Diets

EDITOR'S NOTE: A home economics expert and writer for women's magazines here presents an interesting insight on the two leading presidential nominees. Mrs. Penrose Lilly, whose articles appear in the Women's Home Companion, Pictorial Review, McCall's and the Ladies Home Journal, here tells what Messrs. Hoover and Smith like to eat.

BY MRS. PENROSE LILLY
Written for NEA Service
After all, presidential nominees are human beings, despite what their enemies say about them. And as prominent human beings they interest less conspicuous citizens, who often wonder what presidential nominees like to eat, how long they sleep and how they exercise. Those more personal characteristics, I believe, interest some voters even more than the candidates' views on prohibition, water power, farm relief and foreign relations.

Both Herbert Hoover and Alfred E. Smith take good care of themselves without making a fetish of health and recreation. Mr. Hoover, retiring at 10 o'clock and arising at 7, lives up to the adage, "early to bed and early to rise." Governor Smith, sometimes is forced by pressure of public duties to vary his hour of retirement, but he makes it a point to get at least eight hours of sleep every night.

Neither candidate is a sportsman in the popular sense, but both find relaxation in outdoor sports of the less strenuous sort. Herbert Hoover is an ardent fisherman. Alfred Smith is no mean swimmer and also plays golf with more than average ability.

Both men are careful about their diets. I have learned. They are simple in their tastes and neither is a large eater. Although the Smiths have a Japanese cook, the governor does not like exotic foods. His preferences are those of the plain people from whom he sprang. His favorite dishes are lamb stew, and fish in almost any style. This liking for fish, the governor says, he acquired when he used to work in a New York fish market as a boy.

Mr. Smith has a penchant for chewing cigars and for that reason does not have much appetite for pastries or heavy desserts. He is very fond of ice cream and light desserts and salads such as those made from flavored gelatin and fresh fruit. His Oriental cook says he is an easy person to please.

Mr. Hoover also is a regular fellow in his choice of food. Plain meats and vegetables, a light salad, and a light dessert are his customary preferences. And they always must be served very simply. The Republican nominee has one marked weakness. He is inordinately fond of peanuts. That, of course, may have some significance of the Republican elephant but it never has been proved.

Herbert Hoover's preference for simplicity once saved his housekeeper acute embarrassment. This was man discovered, after all the guests were seated at the official luncheon, that no napkins had been provided. But Mr. Hoover put her at ease by smiling, as he took another peanut, and saying, "It really wouldn't have made any difference if we had eaten the entire luncheon without any napkins."

The simplicity of the private lives of these two leaders of the great political parties should be a matter of interest and satisfaction to the majority of voters, especially women. National ideals should sit easily on the shoulders of either man, it seems to me, because plain living and simple diet fit a man to be a leader far better than late hours and too many cream puffs.

Household Hints

SAL-SODA WATER
Sal-soda water is excellent for cleaning the tub and other bath porcelain.

VINEGAR RUB
Give your furniture a vinegar rub every once in a while. To do this dip a soft cloth in vinegar, wring it out and wipe the furniture with it. Polish with a dry cloth and you will get a fine gloss.

CURLED EDGES
If your rugs curl at the edges or if they have become ruffled by cleaning, you can reshape them easily. Prepare a solution of one pound of glue and one gallon of water. Dissolve over hot water and paint the back of the rug with it, using a large brush. Leave the rug on its face until thoroughly dry.

UNWRINKLED GIRDLES
When washing girdles and corsets, lay them flat on the scrubbing board and wash with a brush and soap suds. Do not wring. Just dip into clear water until free from suds and hang on the line. This prevents wrinkling.

SOFT BLANKETS
If blankets, after being washed and dried, are beaten with an ordinary carpet beater, the wool will be light and soft.

ODORLESS REFRIGERATOR
Put a piece of charcoal on one of the shelves of the refrigerator. It acts as an absorbent for all odors and purifies the air.

THE NEW Saint Sinner

By Anne Austin
©1928 NEA Service, Inc.

"Of course," Tony went on analyzing the marriages of her mother's guests, from the corner of the drawing room where she and Crystal rested from their duties as Mrs. Tarver's assistants. "I don't feel sorry for Mrs. Lincoln Pruitt, like I do for Peg. Mrs. Pruitt looks like the original model for all the cartoonists' caricatures of the typical clubwoman. But who knows but what that club stuff was a defense mechanism against the failure of marriage? Mrs. Pruitt looks as if he'd turned into a steel money-making machine before he was 30, and their frosty politeness to each other in public is the best proof in the world that they hate each other and fight like well-bred cat and dog in private. And now the old boy's all of a twitter about our blessed mam-selle, and George's majestic mamma has her suspicions. She hasn't gone near Mlle. Dumont all evening. The other wives, including my poor Peg, in spite of the fact that she's mam-selle's hostess, are giving the 'French huggy' a wide berth, too. I don't blame 'em. Mam-selle's clearly labeled 'Menace to Wives.'"

"Mrs. Hemmingsway talked to Mam-selle twice when she was dummy," Crystal pointed out. It was queer to be arguing this way with Tony, who was always the more generous of the two.

"I guess you think my sweet young nature is being utterly spoiled by this anti-marriage complex of mine," Tony answered Crystal's unspoken thought with uncanny accuracy. "Maybe it is. But haven't you tumbled yet to what Laura Hemmingsway is doing? She's actually trying to expose Jeff Hemmingsway to Mam-selle's pernicious influence."

"Why?" Crystal demanded. "He's sinfully rich, isn't he?"

"Naive child!" Tony laughed. "And he's also a particularly loathsome beast and poor Laura Hemmingsway hates and fears him. I wonder what hold he has on her."

Faith said something about her once having been a musical composer, whom Jeff Hemmingsway had married in Chicago. Crystal volunteered. "I gathered that there was some sort of scandal."

"That explains it," Tony nodded. "She'd love for him to become involved with Mam-selle, so she could get a divorce and alimony. Life's pretty rotten, Crystal. Now for the Harrisons."

"Oh, but they're nice!" Crystal cried, for somehow she didn't want Tony to prove her case too thoroughly against marriage. Of course she wanted to get married! Every girl did—even Tony, down underneath all this new cynicism.

Nice separately, but not together! Tony repeated her former distinction. "She nags him in an anxious flutter sort of way that simply maddens him almost to the point of murder, and he's jolly and talkative with everyone except her, which makes her cry herself to sleep nearly every night, or I'm a poor student of marriage. Hadn't you noticed that about all married couples cry?"

"Yes, of course I'd noticed that," Crystal retorted. "I'm not blind. . . Well, what are the heinous charges against the Dudley Reeves? Faith likes Mrs. Reeves a lot, and Mrs. Harrison, too. Mrs. Reeves got Faith into some sort of literary club. Bob laughs at it, but Faith enjoys it."

"Just one more tabloid indictment of the ancient and honorable institution of marriage and then the 'little rays of sunshine' have got to serve supper," Tony answered diplomatically.

NEXT: One last humiliation for Mam-selle.

Evening Mode Glitters
With Sequins And Strass

BY BETSY SCHUYLER
NEA Service Writer
NEW YORK — Life gets more complicated for the society-minded, these autumn days, with the social calendar getting fuller and fuller.

The costumes that the fairer of the sex are minded to wear grow more complicated too. For verily, it's a season of formal, elaborately elegant clothes.

Even suits have their little flair for color and beauty in the dainty blouses they inspire. With a bright, dark-blue long-coated suit, Louise Burke wears a handsomely embroidered matching blue crepe blouse, with Egyptian figures coming and going in silver and three shades of blue lighter than the suit. A deeply pointed collar of the suit's blue is a distinctive touch. Her silver fox scarf is a superlative addition, too.

FUR ON SPORTS CLOTHES
The most sporty suits use fur with discrimination. Ruth Ledyard wore a very smart grey tweed to the Ritz for luncheon, little sweetly tailored suit with a narrow, shawl collar of curly lamb in a silvery grey tone. And fine worsted coats seem inclined to feel the need of some intricate decorative stitching or the introduction of some color into their scheme of chic. Natalie Hess wore a lovely beige coat to the Minoela horse show that had its squarish collar faced with beige silk figured in autumn colors.

Of course all these are costumes for daytime wear. When it comes to evening the mode grows delightfully sheer and colorful. Satin is quite as chic as chiffon, fashioned with smart tiers, elaborate puffs at the right spot, peplums and so on. Velvet is seldom seen, though will be popular later. I imagine. And there's a premium on glitter right now.

GREEN, GOLD AND YELLOW
I saw Mrs. Frederick Cameron Church, Jr., at the Empire Theatre the other night in a lovely pale yellow satin, with a squarish neck and very chic side tiers to the skirt. Her jewels were lovely earrings, necklace and a very wide bracelet. She wore an evening coat of green and gold with a collar of green velvet finished with fur tabs.

At the premiere of "Olympia" last week, Mrs. Alan Raymond looked charming in a black chiffon gown with wide décolletage and swaying skirt. On one shoulder she wore a diamond pin. Mrs. Brock Pemberton's white satin gown had a regular cow collar that dipped in the back for a generous décolletage.

Mrs. Vincent Astor wore a gorgeous cape coat to the Ambassador one evening, a cape of gold with a self collar draped with real grace and caught by a jeweled buckle.

At the Paramount dinner dance for the celebrated M. Maurice Chevalier, pastel shades won, with off-white very popular. Irene Bordoni looked distinguished in an off-white moire, with crisp tiers flaring on the sides. Elsie Ferguson was her charming delicate self in an exquisitely fragile looking cream lace gown, over pink chiffon.

MORE CELEBRITIES
Fannie Brice wore a startling gown of black and silver sequins, Little Helen Ford looked demure in white tulle, full and very long. Fannie Ward chose a stunning white chiffon, with crystals from the hip line down. She wore an elaborate jeweled band around her auburn hair. Ina Claire looked stunning in a pale yellow chiffon with molded lines and gorgeous sparkling jewels.

The reception for Mrs. Herbert Hoover at the Republican Women's club was no dressy affair. But some lovely costumes for club women were noted. Among these was one dark blue ensemble, with the blouse hand-embroidered all over in a light, bright blue. Mrs. Hoover wore a black georgette, with stripes of dark gold for its only trim. Her jewels consisted of a sparkling elephant with ruby eyes, on her left shoulder.

ALL WOE AND NO JOY MAKES JACK A DULL BOY

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON
I OFTEN think that mothers would not get so tired nor fathers so harsh nor children so disobedient and fretful if there were more fun in the family.

Have't we all noticed that the homes that seem to run the most smoothly and in which work is accomplished the most quickly, are the homes where there is laughter and happiness, and life is not taken too deadly earnest?

I have in mind one family that in spite of a goodly share of trouble managed to laugh about half of it away. It was not a frivolous family—quite the opposite. But the mother, a woman of unusual character, discovered early in her married life the magic of laughter and its wonderful healing qualities. No doubt there were many days when she did not feel equal to the gay little pretenses but her children and husband seldom guessed when these days were.

CHEERFUL GAMES
She would say suddenly at the table, "Let's play, 'My Ship Comes In.' Then she would start off with, 'My ship comes in later than—'"

"Laden with what?" the children would cry eagerly.

Mother would think, "Laden with G-G."

"G-G?" What could that be? Instantly the questions would begin to fly.

"What color is it? Is it good to eat? Can you wear it? How does it smell?"

G-G turned out to be goose grease. Father finally guessed it. Then it was his turn.

There was a great fund of happy little games for the table. Sometimes it was riddles. If anyone heard a new one it was saved for meal time.

LAUGHED AT HARD LUCK
The children learned to look on their troubles as jokes much of the time. If one of them was called a name, or missed the same word in spelling for the third time in a week, the first thought that popped into his head was, "That will be a good one to tell Mother."

The whole family helps with the work. They make a game of that too. Altogether, there are about as few complexes under that roof as in any home I can think of.

The judge used to say that he wouldn't have so many cases to try if there was more laughter in the homes. Everyone has trouble. Every home has trouble. But all woe and no joy makes a Jack a dull boy.

BETROTHAL RING
CAME OVER ON ZEP

There's a happy little house-maid in East Orange, N. J., these days, for her fiancé came over on the Graf Zeppelin as a machinist, bringing her engagement ring with him.

Other girls, wealthy girls, have been busy all week buying the souvenir handkerchiefs and boutonnieres and other trifles that continental buyers sent home to their firms on the G. Z. But not Miss Dora Stoeck, wearing the first engagement ring ever so transported.

It just reminds one that it's becoming increasingly difficult to have a romance in an unusually romantic manner, what with captains refusing to perform marriages at sea, and with every Tom, Dick and Harry getting married at a world's altitude record height in an airplane. Now who'll go Dora one better?

Chart Game Detects
Cases Of Faulty Vision

NEW YORK—"Johnny," which way is that smallest animal pointing his paws?"

It sounds like a game. Really it is a registered nurse testing the vision of a tot of pre-school age. For the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness is starting a nation-wide campaign of education to safeguard the eyes of children who will enter kindergarten and primary grades a year or so hence.

The three-legged animals are really the letter "E". Through use of the Symbol E Chart, games have been worked out for tiny children which actually test their vision. Children as young as three years can play them.

ALTERNATE SIZES
Big, medium sized and small, the "E's" used seem like three legged animals to the imaginative little child. The nurse poses them this way and that, alternating the position of the various sizes.

Johnny likes to tell if little "E's" has all his paws on the floor, or if great, big "E" is lying on his back with his three paws in the air. If Johnny can't see the tiniest "E", then Nurse knows his vision is deficient.

The technique of the "game" is to have Johnny peep with only one eye as a time, while a card covers the other. He looks at the chart 20 feet away and shows with his arms as well as tells whether the little animals' legs are to the right, the left, upward or downward.

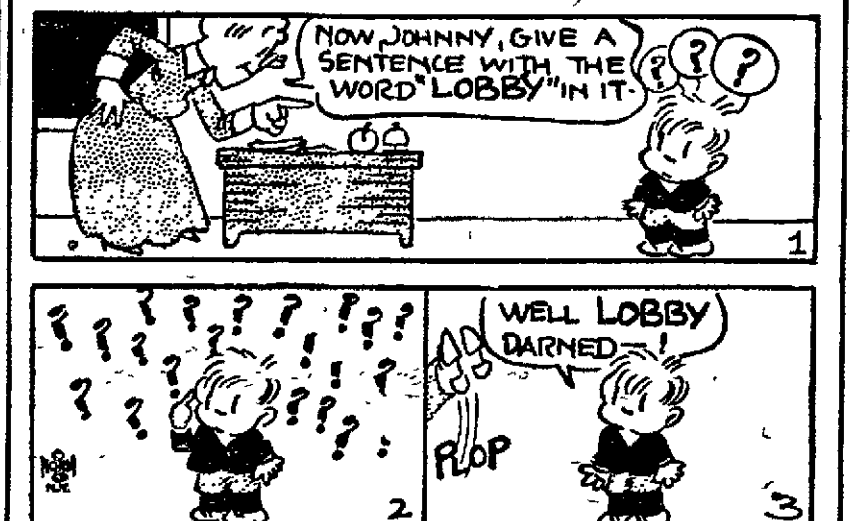

MAY PREVENT BLINDNESS
"Determining the condition of a child's eyes at an early age may prevent blindness," according to Mildred F. Smith, staff nurse with the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness. Miss Smith has just started a tour of the middie west to demonstrate the efficacy of the Symbol E. Chart games.

MILDRED F. SMITH

"If faulty vision is found, immediate steps can be taken to correct it. Even when correction of a defect is accomplished readily, its discovery is important. For lack of appreciation of the child's handicap often develops a mental problem as severe as eye trouble. We hope that the little three-legged animal games will help the vision of all pre-school America eventually."

Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Stevens visited at Oshkosh Friday.

Mrs. Nick Bender and daughter, Florence, returned from Seattle, Wash. Thursday where they spent several months visiting relatives.

SEAT SALE FOR BALLET DANCE GETS UNDERWAY

A writer, in describing Doris Niles, who with her company of 27 will appear at Lawrence Memorial chapel under the auspices of the Appleton Womens club, Nov. 14, said in part: "She is like Sargent's portrait of the Duchess of Alba. She is so Spanish in appearance and in the Spanish suites in her program that she makes one think of a patio in Seville, under the spell of guitars and moonlight."

While Doris Niles, who has gained fame in her own country and abroad, heads as "star" the organization known as Doris Niles and her ballet, the rest of the group is famous also. It is comprised of a ballet of beautiful young girls; her sister, Cornelia, a solo dancer; a select orchestra, some of whose players were members of New York symphony orchestra, and a sextette of virtuoso guitarists, the Rondallas Usandizaga, from the Basque province of Spain. The company carries its own road manager, stage manager and electrician; special scenery, and gorgeous costumes.

The ticket sale for the ballet performance opened Friday at Belting's drugstore.

After mass breakfast will be served at the parish hall.

BREAKS WRIST

Harold Tonnies, 15, town of Greenville, suffered a broken wrist Friday afternoon while cranking an automobile. The engine kicked and his right arm was broken just above the wrist.

George De Byl is spending several days at Oshkosh on a short vacation.

Prettiest Candidate

Miss Emily Marx of New York City may or may not win a seat in the state legislature November 6, but in victory or defeat she will be the prettiest of all candidates, say her friends. She is a Republican, a lawyer, an alumnus of Barnard and Yale Law School, and is bent on a political career. She wears an American Red Cross medal for life saving.

NOTED ORGANIST IS COMING HERE FOR DEDICATION

Music lovers in Appleton are exhibiting unusual interest in the coming organ recital of Palmer Christian, prominent organ virtuoso, who is to play here at the dedication of the Miller pipe organ on Thursday evening, Nov. 22, at the First Congregational church. The ticket sale, to be conducted by the Woman's association of the church, opened Friday.

Mr. Christian's recital and orchestral appearances have taken him from the Pacific to the Atlantic and from Canadian centers to the Mexican line. The Detroit News has said, "Palmer Christian is an artist of sensitive nature, able to discern the composer's most fragile and fugitive thoughts and display the same, crystal clear, to his audience."

Brilliance of technique, warmth of style, imaginative use of tone color and sympathetic interpretation characterize Mr. Christian's playing, and his recital here promises much for music lovers.

MOOSE WILL GO TO MOOSEHEART

The excursion train for Mooseheart will leave at 1:20 Sunday morning from Appleton and will arrive in Mooseheart at 8:45 with a stop in Chicago for breakfast in the dining room of the Northwestern station. STATE CAMPAIGN ENDS SATURDAY; PARTIES NOW REST

Kohler and Schmedeman Both Feel Sure of Victory as Election Nears

Milwaukee—(P)—Somewhat overshadowed by the presidential contest, the fight between the two major parties for the control of the state government drew to a close Saturday, with eyes centered on the verdict to be rendered next Tuesday at the polls.

Except for a few final gestures, designed principally to get out the vote the weeks of political skirmishing, that had centered mainly around the gubernatorial race between Walter J. Kohler, Republican, and Albert G. Schmedeman, Democrat, ended Saturday.

Tuesday the vote will be polled, and a record breaking response is expected from the citizens of the state to the call for the busiest day in the voting booth they have experienced since '24.

Their major task is to indicate their preference for the next President of the United States and elect successors to Senator Robert M. La Follette, and Governor Fred R. Zimmerman. In addition the state's eleven seats in the house of representatives, are to be filled. The rest of the job confronting the voters is to elect the four minor executives of state government—Lieutenant governor, attorney general, secretary of state, and treasurer, select 10 members of the state senate and the entire body of the assembly, lower house of the legislature which convenes in January, and pick county officers, from sheriff and district attorney down.

That is the responsibility of the voters of the state next week to which more than 900,000 of the 1,600,000 believed eligible to vote, are expected to respond. That would exceed by 60,000 the mark of 1924 when 804,000 persons cast ballots in Wisconsin.

Most of the activity in the state campaign has centered around the governorship fight. Kohler and Schmedeman have borne the brunt of the fight for their own election and closely interwoven has been the presidential election. In every speech the Republican nominee endorsed Herbert Hoover, while the name of Al Schmedeman has been linked with Al Smith throughout the Democratic campaign.

BOTH SEE VICTORY

Both foresaw victory for their cause at the polls Tuesday, to climax their intensive campaigns that have carried them into every section of the state. A business administration for the state has been the chief cry of Mr. Kohler, in a campaign for election that has been marked by few promises other than that he would study and work to serve all the people. The use of money in elections has been visualized by Mr. Schmedeman, as the great overshadowing issue in this campaign in which he seeks to return the Democratic party to power in the state after a 30 year vacation.

The Democratic candidate has turned his guns on the Republican candidate, pointing to the reported expenditure of $105,000 in his behalf in the primary campaign in which he defeated Congressman Joseph D. Zimmerman.

A John Doe inquiry admittedly designed to probe into the financing of Mr. Kohler's campaign, and another similar investigation aimed at the Progressives has enlivened the past two months activity and served to focus additional attention upon the expenditure of funds in Wisconsin elections.

The Democratic candidate has made a play for the progressive vote. During the campaign Senator LaFollette, Republican candidate for reelection announced he could not support Mr. Kohler, the nominee of his party for governor. This was followed by the statement of another progressive, Herman L. Elern, chairman of the Republican state central committee that Mr. Kohler had disqualified himself for office, and the open endorsement of Schmedeman by William T. Lajure, progressive leader, and Madison newspaperman, and Mr. Beck.

With the executive committee of the state central committee, whose statutory duty is to conduct the campaign of party nominees, split between conservatives and progressives, Mr. Kohler has conducted an independent campaign.

LA FOLLETTE SURE

His organization was the same as that of his primary campaign, with George L. Gilkey, of Merrill, as the chairman.

Assured by his followers that he would be re-elected Senator LaFollette has made practically no organized effort to arouse the voters upon his behalf. His opponent is State Senator William H. Markham, of Horicon, a Conservative Republican, and an independent candidate who entered the field with the withdrawal of Michael K. Reilly, of Fond du Lac Democratic candidate. Reilly said he saw no conflict between himself and Senator LaFollette in the espousal of Progressive principles.

The four Progressive state officers, Lieutenant Governor Henry A. Huber of Stoughton, who presides over the deliberation of the senate, Attorney General John W. Reynolds, State Treasurer Solomon Levitan, and Theodore Dammin, secretary of state, have opposition from Democratic opponents. They are: Leo P. Fox, Chilton candidate for lieutenant governor, Charles Mulberger, Watertown, secretary of state; Robert K. Henry, Jefferson, state treasurer, and John J. Bowie, Darlington, attorney general.

In the congressional situation, ten of the eleven Wisconsin representatives in the 70th congress are seeking reelection. The eleventh is Mr. Beck who forsook a race for reelection to seek the governorship.

With the exception of the two Milwaukee districts, the races for seats in Congress present a contest between Republicans and Democrats. In the fourth and fifth districts it's a triangular affair composed of Republican, Democrat and Socialist candidates.

Seeker reelection are the Progressives—Henry Allen Cooper, in the first district; Charles A. Kading, second, John Nelson, third; John C. Schaefer, fourth; Florian Lampert, fifth; Edward E. Browne, eighth, George J. Schneider, ninth, James A. Ficar, tenth and H. H. Peavy, eleventh. Viktor Berger, lone Socialist in congress is the representative from the fifth.

Medlin Hull, conservative Republican and weekly newspaper editor of Black River Falls, is the Republican candidate in the seventh to succeed Mr. Beck has the opposition of A. H. Schubert, La Crosse Democrat.

Representative Berger is in a personal struggle with William H. Stafford, Republican candidate, in the fifth, with Thomas O'Malley, Democrat nominee, making it a three cornered race. The same is true in the fourth where Congressman Schaffert, who with Mr. Frear and Hull have been the only Republican candidates for congress supporting Herbert Hoover, is opposed by Walter Totakowski, socialist, and Peter S. Brzonkala Democrat.

With the greatest front presented in 20 years, the Democrats are hopeful of making inroads upon the Republican majority in the legislature but the chief concern appears to be whether the two houses will be controlled by the progressive or conservative element of the Republican party. The conservatives apparently will have the upperhand in the senate, but the complexion of the assembly will not be known until after the election.

Out of 33 seats in the assembly, 16 will be filled Tuesday. The holdovers and the conservatives nominated in September apparently preface a conservative senate. About 60 Republican candidates for the assembly have Democratic opposition. This is in accord with the plans of the Democratic party to stir the party from its lethargy and make a real fight to capture the state for Smith.
